Comments by Literary Folk

Prof. GEORGE SAINTSBURY says, "The 'Tale of a Tub' is one of the very greatest books of the world, one of those in which a great drift of universal thought receives consummate literary form."

Dr. SAMUEL JOHNSON says of "A Tale of a Tub," "There is in it such vigor of mind, such a swarm of thoughts, so much of nature, and art, and life."

SIR WALTER SCOTT says, "This celebrated production ('A Tale of a Tub') is founded upon a simple and obvious allegory, conducted with all the humour of Rabelais, and without his extravagances."

WILLIAM THACKERAY calls him "The greatest wit of all times."

VOLTAIRE says, "There are in Dean Swift many bits of which there are no examples in the ancients. He is Rabelais perfected."
