

as to make them.
and will be put to be left to delay the
of reform. This may e, or fancy they see, ul expenditures; but,
aving portions of the
as one of the greatest e only reasons for to enable the people selves from their em-borne down by heavy fallacious prosperity, onest and honorable what is due. To ens to pay their debts;
ion of all their means, ctions on their indushis Government. To and an open and free With these, and the d industry now every-the period of embar-
to be succeeded by one erity.

A kind Providence
f the globe sufficiently ambition, and abound-ers, which only require s the greatest and most to the full development ntry, we have political nstituted. Indeed, it a system more so than m of State and General constitute one sublime ge of the interests comose local and peculiar so happily constituted, be established, and this ly to the few great opted; leaving the States t, to develop, by the arts sources; and a scene of ould follow, heretofore rust (said Mr. C.) that rst step towards such a Great Britain, it would ion and prudence, to es-h the rest of the world, s of prosperity may be