The burefaced way in interests have been neglected by our interests have been neglected by our interests have been neglected by our dermen is disgraceful. The people in 0. 1 Ward are disgusted with the way hey are treated. I suppose they think as do. It is no use kisking until January, then we can kick the whole crowd out. I oftice now, when our sidewalks want realring, the old planks are taken out and as space filled with earth. I pity the hunreds of peor fellows who go to and from ork along Eastern-avenue, from Papevenue to the Don bridge. Take the distince from Broadview, where the sidewalk is about two feet lower than the add. In soft weather you are ankie deep in whter on a floating platform, or take he road, knee-deep in mud. We were goig to get the Queen-street bridge widend, which is a real necessity. I happened be present at the Executive meeting. Then this question came up, it was struck ut, with a remark from Ald. Lamb that fayor Fleming had promised something the kind at a meeting over the Don, uring the election contest. Our No. 1 reresentative on that committee smiled and course that was the end of it. A good story comes from Markham is connection with the Fair. Among the visors of the last day were J. Patterson of Little York and C. Loudon of Victor Park, who drove out in a hired rig. Whe the fun was over in the evening the two looked up their horse to go home, by couldn't find it anywhere. In a fruite search about the stables they encounter a man and told him of their difficulty. "What color was it?" asked the strange and on learning that it was a dark-gre he blurted out, "Oh, there's a dead hor like that lying back of the barn up throad," and there they found it, dead as door-nail.

John Doughty, an ex-British soldier of some 25 years of age, who couldn't find work, and asked to be sent down, was given 10 days by Magistrate Ormerod on Saturday. Doughty gave himself up at the railway station the evening before, and asked for a night's lodging in jail, saying that he would continue his search for work the next morning, but when morning came he wanted more of jail.
