HOW TO CREATE A CRISIS.

[Toronto Globe] The Mail and Empire thinks that the out depriving himself or his family of lack of popular interest in the Ontario he has willfully transferred, assigned the part of the Ontario ministers, and so long. There may be something in the inability of the ministers to get up a crisis. There is something very dull and prosaic in the harmonious relations party to be committed to the common of the members of the cabinet. Now, if half the ministers would bolt and declare that they had no confidence in the premier, and the premier would retort by saying that the bolters were a nest of traitors, there would be more public interest in the election.

[New York Independent.] Dr. Hepworth's last letter from his mission on behalf of the New York Herald and the Sultan of Turkey, indicates that it is impossible for him not although there has been impressed on him provocation on both sides.
