The indictment charges Bolo Pasha with having maintained communication, with the enemy in Switzerland in 1915, and in Paris the same year, when he received German money from Cavallinie to further the pacifist movement; in the United States in 1916, for having received through Adolph Pavenstedt, once head of a New York banking house, and the Deutsche Bank. German money to influence the French newspapers, and for advancing money to the director of the Paris Journal. Broad smiles passed over the faces of those in the court when Pavenstedt, Abbas Hilmi, the former khedive of Egypt, and the latter's ministers, Youssief Saddik Pasha, were called as witnesses, and their absence from the courtroom duly noted.

When I was brought home again, I went to the defendant, as well as some of the country for a change of air. I seemed to be a little better while there, but after my return home I did not feel much better. I used to have nervous spells, when my limbs would begin to shake then grow cold, and I would be completely exhausted. I was also troubled with an accumulation of gas on my stomach, which caused papitation of the heart. At last I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after I had used them for a while, I could see that they were helping me, so I continued used them for a while, I could see that they were helping me, so I continued sieep well at night, and was able to dony own housework. "I am no traitor. I have asked to be judged, and I am willing to die; but not as a traitor."

Thus spoke Bolo Pasha as he tried to extricate himself from the conclusions of Capt. Bouchardon of the Paris military court, who took the preliminary testimony, and asked for explanations by Col. Voyer, the president of the court-martial.

When former Premier Caillaux was called as a witness for the defence Bolo said he would waive Caillaux's testimony, but Darius Pochere, a codefendant, objected to this, declaring that Caillaux's testimony must be heard, if not in the present case then on behalf of himself.

During the reading of Capt, Bouchardon's reply, Bolo appeared somewhat bored, but when called upon by the president of the court-martial to explain discrepancies in his previous testimony the prisoner soon became air to the prosecuting attorney and the many discrepancies, and altogether was considered to have the better of the repartee.

Why He Kept No Books.

On being questioned by Capt, Mornet, the prosecutor, why, considering the volume of business transacted by him, he kept no books or records, Eolo repiled: "I am the master of money, not its slave."

Bolo declared that the money he received from Abbas Hilmi, former khedive of Egypt, through Fillipo Cavelleni, an Italian, who is alleged to have taken $400,000 to Bolo Pasha's notel in Paris in April, 1915, was in repayment of a loan made to the khedive in 1914. Bolo asserted that he obtained the abdication of Abbas Hilmi, and declared that he used all his influence to have the former khedive exert his energies in the interest of the Entente Allies.

Bolo's explanation of his activities in Switzerland had not been completed when court was adjourned for the day.
