RUSSELL IS ARRESTED FOR ONTARIO GOVT.

Alleged Partner of Frank Law in Mining Swindles in Custody—Reputed to Be Millionaire and High in Politics.

LIMA, Ohio, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Upon the orders of United States Marshal Chandler of Cleveland, Chief of Police Heffern of Toledo arrested William Lockhart Russell, the millionaire oil and mining magnate, at Lima, Ohio, to-day, awaiting the arrival of a deputy marshal from Toledo with a proper warrant, charging him with obtaining money under false pretences in connection with mining promotions in Toronto, Canada.

Russell returned to his home in Lima about ten days ago from Ecuador, after being engaged there for the past year in the construction of telephone lines.

He is prepared to fight his case in Toronto, claiming that he was in Europe at the time of the alleged misdeeds.

Russell was arrested on the complaint of the Ontario attorney-general, who is in partnership with Frank Law of Toronto, now serving a five-year term in the penitentiary for the flotation of the Silver Bird, Lucky Boys, Blue Bell and other mining companies, which the crown alleged were, simply fraudulent creations for the swindling of small investors or speculators in mining shares.

During the last year, Russell was said to be in Paris, but it was repeatedly promised that he would return to Toronto to face his accusers. Instead, he went to South America, returning to this city on Wednesday last.

A Prominent Citizen.

Russell has always been regarded as one of the representative citizens of Lima, and has been a resident here for the past six years, living in elegant style in a beautiful colonial mansion on fashionable West Market street.

Russell was once before a citizen here, when his days of splendor and wealth were yet in the future. He came here with his parents back in the 80s, being then an oil field worker. His first wife is yet well remembered, and he has two grown sons, now in college, as the result of that union.

Russell, in 1901-1902, promoted the United States Oil Co., and the Ford Extension, both million dollar enterprises, and during the high price of oil paying big dividends. Much of the capital in these enterprises came from England and France. He later took up the Union Oil, Gas and Refining Co., but this proved a failure. Russell retired from the oil trade in the decline of the stock market period, and organized the Bank of Lima, with a capital of $50,000, a savings bank feature being offered the public. When the Lima bank became interested in Canada, the bank was merged with another, and the room still remains vacant.

Family is Highly Respected.

W. Russell, as a typical American, and from the oil fields has come to the mining districts of South America and to the icy climates of the Klondike, where he secured valuable claims and got his first real start. But before this he had been a boy hustler, selling sewing machines through northeastern Ohio before his amity. His family character is highly respected and he has given some of the most brilliant social successes in the city. The drawing rooms of his southern mansion in a northern clime are always open to the social set, and no company of society circle is more popular than his beautiful young wife, who he wedded at Wheeling in 1902, as Miss Beatrice King. Miss Olive King, a sister, is now making her home here, and is also very popular in the social world.

Russell has been philanthropic and generous. He has gained a permanent social footing, and in private life his word is as good as a bond. He was elected a delegate to the National Republican convention in 1904, and is a strong supporter of President Taft.

When the Law & Co. case was first mentioned here, Mr. Russell consented to an interview, and stated that he who had not advised he understood there were objections to the literature that had been utilized by President Frank Law, Russell himself being vice-president of the company attacked.

Early in October last Mr. and Mrs. Russell, with Miss Olive King, sailed for Europe, spent four months in London, and were in Paris at the time the Canadian law suit began. He was planning a South American voyage, but returned directly here and consulted counsel.

M'GUIGAN TO BE MANAGER OF SOO WORKS

Montreal Story Declares That Railwayman and Contractor Is To Take Charge of Soo Corporation.

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—It is understood that within a limited period, F. H. McGuigan, formerly manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, and now of the F. H. McGuigan Construction Company, which is building the Ontario Government power line from Toronto to Niagara Falls, will become president of the Lake Superior Corporation, that industry having of late come under the control of a group of London capitalists who have been looking around for a man to take charge and reorganize the enterprise.

In the person of Mr. McGuigan, the holders of the controlling interest in a capital amounting to nearly four millions believe they have found the right man, for that gentleman has not only the reputation of being a very able railway man—a desirable necessity since an energetic railway policy is to enter into the company's plans—but is, besides, a powerful administrator.

It is stated that before the ex-manager of the Grand Trunk would enter upon the position, which was offered him by an important group of country capitalists, he had to give his hand to a very large sum of money, and especially as regards the railway policy of the Lake Superior company.

These concessions, it appears, have been freely given Mr. McGuigan, who is to enter upon the undertaking with a salary at least of $25,000 per annum.

Besides exploiting the pulp and paper industry and the great ore bodies within reach of the works, the steel railway industry will be carried on very largely.

It is understood that a progressive railway policy has been decided upon, which will embrace the extension of the Algoma Central, and the development of the Lake Superior Corporation, away north to the transcontinental, thus opening new deposits of iron ore, and bringing the products to within easy distance of the Canadian side of the Soo.

It is said that Mr. McGuigan has already sent engineers over the road, and sufficient data have been secured to justify an energetic policy being pursued when the new president's plans are matured.

TO STRIKE AT SPRINGHILL
U. M. W. Have Determined to Call Men Out.

SYDNEY, N.S., Aug. 8.—(Special.)—The Springhill strike will be called on Tuesday. Positive assurance to that effect has been given by U. M. W. officials who have just returned from that colliery district.

The strike will have nothing whatever to do with the Glace Bay difficulty. Conditions existing at Springhill are entirely different. U. M. W. viewpoint, that those at Glace Bay, shorter hours, better wages, and better conditions for the miners generally will be demanded.

A meeting of the U. M. W. is called for Tuesday evening at Sydney Mines, when the advisability of calling the men out from the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Mines will be considered. It is understood that the gathering will be of a perfunctory character, as it has already been decided by the U. M. W. that a strike will be called at this point.

From the tone of events it looks as if the war would be brought into Sydney mines before the end of this week.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The acute stage reached in the dispute between Turkey and Greece over Crete is causing anxiety in the European capitals, but there is no idea that hostilities will result. THE KING HIMSELF CAN'T STOP STRIKE

Calls Leaders of Contending Forces Together, But Orders Go Out For Extension of the Tie-up.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 8.—The deep of the business of the country as the result of the general strike is so serious King Gustave has intervened in an endeavor to secure a compromise. His majesty to-day sent a message to the parties at conflict, exhorting them to come to an agreement at the earliest moment possible, and advising arbitration of the disputed questions.

It was after King Gustave's message had been read and approved at a cabinet meeting Saturday, that his majesty summoned to the palace the two leaders of the warring factions, Director Von Sydow of the employers and Senator Lindquist, President of the Federation of Labor Unions, for a conference.

The result of this conference has not yet transpired, but apparently his majesty's efforts for a peaceful solution of the trouble were without result, for tonight it was announced that the printers would strike to-morrow, and the national labor union issued a proclamation that "beginning to-morrow morning every day or other wagon whose driver is not wearing a union permit badge, will be stopped by strikers."

The union further threatens to frustrate the attempt of the Stockholm street car company, to start its run to-morrow on the important lines with the aid of the company's officials and strike breakers.

Over 1000 telephone and telegraph employees will strike Wednesday night. The employers' association is paying out $40,000 daily to support its weaker members. The association has a reserve fund of $4,500,000.

The strikers are daily receiving large contributions from Denmark, Norway, Finland, Germany, Roumania and Bulgaria.

The bakers declare that the bread supply is exhausted. The farm laborers' union announced to-day that 15,000 members would strike as the crop is ready for harvest.

LORDS ON THE BUDGET WILL REPRESENT PEOPLE

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The vexed question as to whether the house of lords would interfere with the budget, which action, the radicals declare, would be unconstitutional, appears to be settled by the pronouncement of Lord Lansdowne, leader of the opposition in the lords, in a speech at Calne, Wiltshire, Saturday night.

Declaring that the working classes desired tariff reform, and not the taxation of capital and the expropriation of property, Lord Lansdowne suggested that the house of commons may no longer represent the will of the people.

"Those who advance the extreme claim in behalf of the commons," he said, "declare that any measure, however violent, however little it may have been discussed in parliament, and no matter whether it has been properly put before the people, must be passed over the heads of the house of lords."

"The scheme of the house of lords is much more moderate. We recognize that the will of the people must prevail in the end, but we demand that the people of the country be given full and sufficient opportunity to express that will with full and sufficient knowledge of the situation."

"Upon that knowledge," declared Lord Lansdowne, "the lords are ready to try conclusions in the great struggle which must surely be upon us before very long."

"The lords are ready to meet their adversaries, and will accept the verdict of the people."

BAR-ROOMS OPEN SUNDAY HOTTEST DAY N YEARS

Under Restaurant Licenses Some Temperature Was 93.3—One of the 41 Cut-Off Hotels Operate

Wide open were some of the forty-one cut-off hotels on Sunday, and all a late hour Saturday night. The blinds were up and the bar doors bolted back, so that anyone who wished to enter might do so.

Under restaurant licenses they catered to the public, and some of them did a flourishing trade.

T. J. Boland, proprietor of the New Army Hotel, at Queen and Simcoe streets, took out his license on Saturday morning, and when the usual hour for closing, 7 o'clock, arrived, he continued to do business, dispensing sandwiches, "local option" beer and other mild but refreshing beverages. Sunday morning he opened up, and there was a steady run of customers till after 3 o'clock, when he closed.

The public had the choice of a sandwich and Star beer or Star beer without the sandwich. If his preference was lemon sour or other pungent soft drinks, without the sandwich, these were on tap, but the strictly alcoholic beverages were not to be had.

The New Carlton, at Yonge and Richmond, was also open Saturday night and Sunday, when the licensed bars were closed tight. The bar did a rushing restaurant business, local option beers being in great demand.

Other places deprived of liquor licenses are also contemplating the move, and by next Sunday there may be a score or more bars open for trade.

HORSELESS SUNDAY IN LONDON

For Eight Hours an Experiment Will Be Tried.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 8.—An experimental horseless Sunday is about to be tried in London, and for eight hours all horse-drawn vehicles will be excluded from the area in the Westminster district, their places being taken by auto cabs and buses. The cost of diverting horse traffic and providing automobiles to give free transit for those who otherwise would cross the area in horse-drawn vehicles is estimated at about one thousand pounds, which sum is being raised by voluntary subscription.

It is anticipated that the experiment will have the effect of demonstrating very clearly the advantages of automobiles over horse traffic, especially from the standpoints of cleanliness, silence, speed and controllability.

A bill for the appointment in London of a high commissioner has been introduced in the Australian Parliament. The salary is $4000 inclusive.

29TH YEAR

LOYD-GEORGE ROUTS COUPLE OF DUKES

Rich London Landlords Assail But Cannot Stop Chancellor and His Taxes—Anti-Budget Paper Turns.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—A London cable to the New York Times says: A bombshell was exploded in British politics last week, and practically changed the whole aspect of the situation in regard to David Lloyd-George's budget.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has been waging, even since he introduced the financial proposals in the spring, a fight which has been growing more better every week. Not for years has a political question in England given birth to such a flood of personal invective as the present discussion of the budgetary measure. His opponents began by calling Mr. Lloyd-George a Socialist. They have now reached the point of describing him as a Jack Cade, and, in the bitterness usually engendered by approaching defeat, are likely to go to even further in the way of invective.

Mr. Lloyd-George is not the man to accept denunciation lightly, and, as his is perhaps the most nimble wit in the English political arena, he is a dangerous antagonist to tackle, as the Duke of Westminster discovered last week.

The Duke has been urged by his sympathizers to sue the Chancellor for libel. Such an action would destroy all the attraction of novelty, but Westminster in a letter to the papers intimated that he would take no legal steps.

"While in other circumstances," he writes, "I should be disposed to attach importance to every utterance coming from the chancellor of the exchequer, the traditions of the great office have become so far submerged under the personal idiosyncrasies of the present occupant that a person attacked from that quarter should find all that is necessary in any defence in the fairness and sense of decency still inherent in the community."

After the Moneyed Dukes.
There is no need to enter into the details of the case which Mr. Lloyd-George made out against the Duke of Westminster. The latter was simply cited as a dual and striking instance of the way in which landowners whose the chancellor purposes to tax, benefit by the unearned increment.

Mr. Lloyd-George, by the way, has more than one dual scalp hanging at his belt.

"Mr. Lloyd-George seems, I do not know why, to have a special grudge against dukes," writes Lord Salisbury to a correspondent. "They are twenty-seven in number, and if he confiscated the whole of their property it would only bring in, say, from £200,000,000 to £300,000,000, and affect our taxation for one or two years; after which everything would go on as before, but with this unfortunate difference—that the security of property would have been shaken, enterprise and thrift would have been discouraged, and capital-driven out of the country."

The Duke of Portland, who like the Duke of Westminster, is another of the great London landlords, has been singled out for attention which his grace has declined to such a degree that he addressed a meeting of his tenants at Welbeck Abbey and delivered himself of his opinion on the budget. The Duke was supported on the platform by a brilliant company, which included the Duchess of Marlborough and Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor, and his speech, in which he described for his agricultural tenants the horrors of the budget, was warmly received.

As for Mr. Lloyd-George, said the duke, he "read the chancellor's speeches with surprise, sorrow, and a certain measure of contempt." Mr. Lloyd-George himself has not yet responded to this dual critic, but one of the Radical papers took up the cudgels in his behalf by printing a column of history of the Port and family, which is not altogether edifying reading.

Support From Daily Mail.
This is enough to show some very hard hitting on both sides in the budget battle. But a blow was dealt the Unknot party last week which has thrown it into complete disarray, horse, foot and artillery—in other words, both lords and commons. This was the commission by The Daily Mail that the country generally is not sympathizing with the hard case of the dual and other land owners menaced by Mr. Lloyd-George, but on the contrary is welcoming the promises of an amelioration of the lot of other classes of the population promised by the budget.

Coming from a paper which had hitherto been strongly denunciatory of the Lloyd-Georgian proposals, that voice-face is a political sensation on a grand scale. The new attitude of The Daily Mail is taken by friends and foes alike to mean that David Lloyd-George is the winning side—the side on which are the big battalions, which make journalism as well as Napoleonic successes.

There is no more talk of the lords throwing out the land taxation clauses of the budget or even of prolonging the discussion upon them in the house of commons, and, in fact, it is now the general impression that Lloyd-George's budget will pass the commons in September and be ratified by the lords a few weeks later, thus closing a remarkable chapter of English history.
