

MEDICAL REPORT.

In presenting the 42nd Annual Medical Report we cannot claim the same freedom from contagious disease that we have generally been able to do. There was a severe epidemic of measles, during which two patients died. This was a low rate of mortality considering the number and severity of the cases. There was one death from croup. Apart from this outbreak the children have—as usual—enjoyed remarkable immunity from disease; in fact, many an anxious mother would like to know the “ways and means” by which Miss Wheelwright preserves the health of such a large family.

However, another year has gone and although it brought its anxious hours to all interested in the “Home,” and especially to those caring for the sick, yet there is abundant cause for thankfulness to Him who loves the little ones, for innumerable blessings.

In concluding this report the attending physicians have again the pleasure of acknowledging the uniform courtesies extended to them by the Board, the Matron, the nurses and especially the grateful recognition by smiles and kindly welcomes of the children for any services rendered them.
