THE JABAICA EMBITION.

The dama Brown, M. P., of Hamilton, the beginning the audience was interested a government in reply to the memorial of the council last year, this committee to report to the general committee of committee in order that the latter may bring the whole matter before the council. It appears that the committee of last year has never even been called together, and there is no guarantee that it will be called to inspand the desire. The main object of the fight gainst the amendment which was offered that a new committee of the bagainst the amendment which was moved by All. Forrest and carried, we have been the fear that a new committee might be favorable to harder improvements, and might do something that would advance the interest of order parts and the common seed to the Dominian government, asking the government to grant a renewal of the lease of the Carleton Branch railway and wharf privileges to the New Brunswick Railway to the Canadian Pacific Co. This resolution might have been a very proper one a few weeks ago, but as the formal transfer of the New Brunswick Railway to the Canadian Pacific Co. It appears that the resignations were signed last Thursday night before Messrs. Turner and Lewis, But although they were signed before the trial came on, they were not filed until after the trial commenced, and the filing with the secretary was the essential part of the matter, just as the registration of a deed is essential to its validity. The law ought to be changed so as to give costs.

When we came to the Glacier House we were heartily glad of another breathing spell. We had crossed the highest bridge on the C. P. R. which some one told us was a mile and a half high. It is over the Commania River. It is just as well before not to spendate on what might happen if the smallest thing went astray. It seems strange now to think of the equanimity with which we ascended the mountain side, and listened to the sound of the air. ige held that under this state of facts When we came to the Glacier House we

The law between the continuous and the second of the mountain side, and listened to the sound of the air brakes as we went down some steep income of the resignations of those they are proceeding against, when the resignations are not filed within a certain number of days before the day set down for the trial.

An amendment is also required in law as respects the giving of evidence At the Westmorland trial Delancey M libur of Moncton testified that he and Mat. Lodge were working for Messrs.

Powell and Stevens at the polling booth in the Pythian Hall, that they had whiskey there and that Mat. Lodge gave him a sum of money. On being asked if he had bribed electors he declined to Charles Frohman has disposed of an interest in "The Private Secretary" to swer on the ground that the answ

"Sweet Lavender," by Pinero, has been recently adapted by the German dramatist Emil Pchl, and Dr. Blumenthial the literary manager of Berlin has undertaken a like task with "The Profligate." "Sweet Lavender," is also in preparation in an Italian version which will be produced in Florence and elsewhere.

pose of preventing the "outrageous deal" which Mr. Hanington and Mr. Melans son had made with the government candidates for the purpose of avoiding a contest in Westmorland. Their pure and patriotic souls were moved to great wrath at the idea of the eloquent Dantrying to save himself from the expenditure and trouble which an election involved. Strong in the righteousness of their cause they threw themselves upon the people and were triumphantly returned. But while in this sublime attitude it appeared that they had likewise thrown into the contest many talents in the shape of bank bills and divers stimulating liquors in the shape of rum and whiskey which were freely expended and lavished for the purpose of electing the two Westmorland purists, Powell and Stevens. An election petition was filed against them, but they laughed it to scorn. They were bold and loud in their denunciations of the attempts of their opponents to pall them from their seats and no one would have suspected from their demeanor that there was the slightest prospect of the proceedings against them being seates and no one would have suspected from their demeanor that there was the slightest prospect of the proceedings against them being seates and no one would have suspected from their demeanor that there was the slightest prospect one, and will need with suspectance of conidence was mere "bluff," and that they knew well that if they stood their trial they knew well that if they stood their trial they would not only be unseated but would be disqualified. So they had their resignations prepared and witnessed in advance of the trial and ready to file in the ment they gave the word. The time for word and they gave the word. Yet grand as the scene was—to me, at least, the chief impression was one of peace and strength. Why, I do not know, but it seemed as if the worries, jealousies and quarrels that wear our lives away were such small things. Behind it all was a great, deep, loving heart; and human hearts were at the bottom, made after the same pattern. One could understand the feeling of him who said, "I will lift up mine eyes to the hills, from whence cometh my weld." No gree but a present a was sent to Pramatic News.

The provincial law for the trial of election petitions appears to be defective in certain important particulars and ought to be amended. If, as Judge Tuck rules, the petitioner can be put out of court summarily by the neglect of the clerk of the pleas to forward the network of the pleas to froward the petitioner has no control over the clerk of the pleas but the judge, then the law should be so amended as to cure this evil. The petitioner has no control over the clerk of the pleas but the judges have, and while the petitioner may remind the clerk of the pleas of his duty, he cannot compel him to perform it. The law ought to be so changed as to make it impossible for the petition dismissed, as might have hear to the case in Westmorland, or to have his petition.

The law also requires amendment in respect to the awarding of costs in cases where the member petitioned
