From information placed at my dis posal by the director of the city abattoirs, it appears that the bulk of the animals arriving from England find their way direct to the slaughterhouse. Although the greater part comes from London, the trade is by no means confined to this quarter, the imports in last Spinning Boy was 1st; Mr. Croker's week's official list showing that no less than 76 were brought from Hull and Newcastle. One dealer in Antwerp alone, (an Englishman) disposed of upwards of 3.080 horses last year to the local butchers. On the other hand, it is positively denied, as far as Antwerp is concerned, that any of the meat finds its way back to England, either in the form of "tinned beef" or soup. Not a single meatpreserving establishment exists in the city. My informant, who is a staunch adherent of horse flesh as a "wholesome and nutritious diet" for the workingman, confirmed the measures about to be taken guarding against tuberculosis and glanders. A further experiment is to be tried at Rotterdam by subjecting "all suspicious meat to treatment in steam chambers heated to 100 degrees Centigrade (a temperature which has been scientifically proved sufficient to kill the bacillus), and to sell the meat so steamed at prices ranging from 1f., 50c per kilo (about 6d per pound), the residue of the broth included."

There are in Antwerp about thirty shops devoted entirely to the sale of horseflesh. I visited several of these establishments; but, with the thermometer 80 in the shade, the meat, of which the bulk had been slaughtered at leat tennis tournament closed here on Satur- two days previously, did not present an appearance which was calculated to make converts. Still less so wire the sausages of dusky hue which appear to form the staple delicacy when the meat was unfitted for sale in its natural state. The prices run from 41-2d per pound for "prime cuts" to about 2d for 'scraps." When it is rem mbered that, apart from the government ban laid upon imported horseflesh, there is in Belgium a duty of nearly three-quarters of a cent per pound on all other imno ted meat. It is easy to understand why Australian mutton is yet practically unknown here, and why among the poorer classes horse is the only food flesh available.—London Chronicle, PIGEONS OUTWIT A HAWK H. S. Edwards owned a flock of pigeons which were one day cut off from their cote by a large hawk. The pigeons knew that if the hawk once got above them, one, at least of their number would go to make the hawk a meak and so up they flew in circles, perhaps hoping to go higher than the hawk. In the rising game they were no match for the hawk. The latter kept under the pigeons and leisurely followed their laborous movements.

Then came a curious and unexpected sight to Mr. Edwards. Every pigeon closed its wings, when they appeared to be the size of sparrows, and down they came past the hawk at a terriffic rate. That astonished the hawk. When it got down to the barnyard not a pigeon was sight-some were in the cote, some in the porch, two in the well-house and one was in the kirchen. The hawk had been out-witted completely.—Atlantic Sportsman. which were one day cut off from their cote
