in the St. James Gazette this afternoon to the effect that Lord Curzon, the Viceon account of his wife's illness, and that Lord Milner, who recently resigned the high commissionership of South Africa, is likely to be appointed his successor.

The Associated Press learns, however, that Lord Curzon has taken no steps whatever to be relieved of his post, and that he has still every intention of reassuming the viceroyalty. Of course, it is conceivable that the issue of Lady Curzon's illness might raise insuperable obstacles to his return to the Far East. Even in that event, the appointment, it is understood, would be given to Lord Selborne, the first lord of the admiralty.
