Spectacles
The undermentioned advantages are claimed for Mackenzie's spectacles. 1st.—That from their construction of the Glasses they Assist and Preserve the sight, rendering frequent changes unnecessary. 2nd.—That they confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision, with an amount of ease and comfort not hitherto enjoyed by spectacle wearers. 3rd.—That the material from which the Lenses are ground is manufactured especially for optical purposes, by DR. CHARLES BARDON'S improved patent method, and is pure, Hard and Brittle and not liable to become scratched. 4th.—That the frames in which they are set, whether in Gold, Silver or Steel, are of the finest quality and finish, and guaranteed perfect in every respect. The long wearings acts here and you will want a pair of good glasses, so come to the Medical Hall and be properly fitted or charge.

Were Friends

Miss Collier looked up to the lieutenant's face as he stood before her and asked:
"Shall we dance or sit it out?"
Stanley said:
"Your pleasure is mine," and guessing what her pleasure was, he added:
"Shall we go on the steps or stay here?"
She rose, and they went out into the warm spring night.
"I knew you did not want to dance," said Miss Collier.
For reasons best known to himself Stanley was in no gracious mood. He answered unconvincingly: "But perhaps I did."
"Then," with the softest intonation of her soft voice, "I am more interested in your welfare than you are yourself. If you are to start at reveille you should rest now. You should really not have come to-night."
She knew why he had come. She knew that it was because Mauricia Meredith had told him that if he were going to see Miss Collier, she would release him and go with Mr. Kendall, which was tantamount to compulsion.
Stanley now contrasted her indifference with the Collier gentleness, so delicious tones. Of a sudden he wondered if Miss Meredith were selfish, which was what Miss Collier meant him to wonder. A still, smooth voice often flows over unexpected depths. But of course she was not. She was a mere friend. She would, perhaps, have it to do to-night enough in the dull future. It might be best to begin at once.
The thinking of a silver bell came to Stanley as he walked through the night, and out of that night emerged another figure. It ran up the steps of front door and closed the door. She drew her cape about her shoulders and groped her way out of her room, through the stairs.
A candle was burning in the hall. She went on into the dining-room.
"Yes, it is late—past four. We will be ready in ten minutes."
He went out and the girl looked again into the darkness which grew thicker before the dawn. "Were friends?" Well, she would meet contrast a mere friend. She would, perhaps, have it to do to-night enough in the dull future. It might be best to begin at once.

A candle was burning in the hall. She went on into the dining-room.
"Yes, it is late—past four. We will be ready in ten minutes."
He went out and the girl looked again into the darkness which grew thicker before the dawn. "Were friends?" Well, she would meet contrast a mere friend. She would, perhaps, have it to do to-night enough in the dull future. It might be best to begin at once.
The thinking of a silver bell came to Stanley as he walked through the night, and out of that night emerged another figure. It ran up the steps of front door and closed the door. She drew her cape about her shoulders and groped her way out of her room, through the stairs.
