FAMILY REHABILITATION.

This detailed work is done by trained social service workers.

A Public Health Nurse telephoned us that a mother who was from a far land had died in the hospital, leaving her little thirteen-year-old girl unprotected in a not desirable quarter of the city. The Big Sisters were in that desolate home the same day and undertook the responsibility of caring for "Jeannette." Her small inheritance was placed to her credit in a bank and a kind home was found for her small self where "Jeannette" might continue to attend school, board free, until distant relations could be induced to have her go to them. A volunteer Big Sister has helped to ease the sorrow in Jeannette's life by taking her on many pleasure trips in her friendly car and by welcoming the child to her home whenever she wanted "Some place to go."

"Madge" was a delicate hard-working little clerk in a large store which sent us word that she needed our care. A Big Sister secretary called on "Madge" and read the warning in the flushed cheek and the too-bright eyes. She persuaded her to go for a medical examination, where the verdict was passed that only a sanitarium would give her a chance for life. The Big Sisters arranged that "Madge"
