

When You Buy a Fence Do As If Buying a Work Horse

Look for the details that will be tested out early in service. No matter how good a horse looks, he is not of much value if he has poor feet. It is the same with wire fence. Don't be deceived into thinking that all fences will give equal service. You don't have to go far to see that this is not the case, but if you will examine a good stretch of Frost Fence, you will see that it has every provision for long and satisfactory service, and good reserve strength and spring.

It's service you want in a fence, not merely appearance—and if a fence is going to give satisfactory service it must be made of right quality of material and must have good, strong reserve spring. It's because Frost Fence is built exactly on these lines, that you will always find it prepared for any strain that may come upon it.

"Frost" Fence

Frost Fence is extra good value for the money, because it guarantees you years of satisfactory service. In buying a fence, price should be your last consideration; you should first be sure that the fence has all the qualities necessary to give you good service. We could easily make a fence to sell as low as the lowest, but we prefer to produce a fence that you will want to recommend to your neighbors and friends after you have had it on your own farm. This is exactly what has won such a large sale for Frost Fence—that we are today making all our own wire. Don't take the risk of buying a so-called cheaper fence. It is economy to buy Frost Fence—and you can be sure you will get good service.
