WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10. JUGGLING WITH BYE-ELEC.

"A democrat up to the hilt" writes The Ottawa Citizen, arguing that the present method of holding byeelections, revives on a small scale ses which prevailed long ago in general elections. "The system which prevailed 35 or 40 years ago was liable to abuses. "The government, having in its hands the whole election machinery, manipulated it to suit its own purpose—to contribute to the success of ministers and their upporters. The election campaign, from dissolution to the return of the writs, usually extended from 70 to 100 days. This, of itself, with the excitement and turmoil consequent therein was far from being a mendable feature. On receipt of the writ the returning officer fixed the duties of nomination, polling and de-claration within the limits prescribed by the statute. The interregnum between dissolution and polling was practically subdivided into three perlods. In the first period only writs were issued and rushed for the strongholds, the safe constituencies of government candidates. Many of these went by acclamation, or by overwhelming majorities. These successes added eclat and prestige to the final triumph of the government. In the second period doubtful constituencies were attacked. One by one was government influence conce. crated upon them; and too frequently the result bore testimony to the methods pursued. It not in requently happened that the government mergsolute majority of the representatives as avowed supporters. In the third eriod, with the increased prestige and eclat which the presumption gives, the government went into the strong holds of the opposition, sometimes capturing seats considered almost

The writer gives the Liberals credit for introducing the system of holding all the general elections on one day, but says that the abuse has crep up again in the bye-elections, both Conservative and Liberal governments having been guilty. WAR, RED WAR.

The rupture of diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan unquestionably means war. That which has so long been feared has come at last. In no case will there be more acute tension than throughout the British Empire, and in none of the selfgoverning colonies more so than in While her immediate trade concern is not so great yet as that some other countries, as a matter of future expansion the preservation of the open door in Northern China pecomes a momentous question. In this her interest is as intimate as that of the United States. If the Pacific is to rival the Atlantic as one of the commercial highways of the world, no nation will profit more from it than Canada, providing, as it will, the natural butlet for the wast wealth of field and mine lying unexploited in the Far West.

Apart from her position as an integral part of the empire, Canada has special reason to watch the progress of this conflict with keen attention, nor will it be possible to avoid a sympathetic feeling for the holds within it such great possibilities for her. There will be much speculation as to the chances of Britain being involved as an active participant. A few months ago such an issue would have been more readily anticipated. The conclusion of the British-Japanese treaty was hailed at the time as a masterly counter-stroke to the influence of the dual alliance between Russia and France and as restoring the supremacy of Britain in the eastern seas. Had the conditions then existing remained unaltered, the United Kingdom could not have seen

It has been distinctly stated that

Great Britain has made it unmistakably plain to Japan that under no circumstances will she interfere unless in the contingency contemplated in the treaty, and that France made a similar intimation to Russia. That Britiin and France have been unitedly striving for peace is certain, and there is no reason to doubt that a mutual understanding prevails between them as regards their future conduct. This, of course, does not mean that the sympathies of the British people and the Imperial Government are not now enlist. ed on the side of Japan. It would be futile to deny that a Japanese victory means much for British interests in the East, both direct and in direct. That was a significant remark of the British envoy to Japan when in a recent speech he quoted the legend graven on the historic sword—on one side, "Be slow to draw me," and on the other, "Nor sheather me save with honor." Military honor is a tradition in Japan, and the chivalry of the middle ages holds up no nobler examples than have been gotiations would not for a moment be entertained. direct. That was a significant regiven by her nobles during the an-

Ottawa Journal.

The exports of Canadian farm proluce-our sales to other countries vere fourteen millions greater last were fourteen millions greater last year than all our other exports put together—greater than all the combined sales abroad from our forests, our fisheries, our mines, our manufactures, our ships. Canada's total sales to other countries last year came to $214,000,000. Farm produce gave $114,000,000 of that.

Such is the meaning of agriculture to Canada. It means more than all other industries put together. To this supreme Canadan industry it is that Chambirlainism proposes to give a tremendous advantage in the world's greatest market.

PROTECTION IN ENGLAND.

Pittsburg Gazette. Great Britain prospered in free rade for years and the United States prospered and grew under the protective system. That far the war of deas seemed even. Then Britain began to lose and the United State advanced by leaps and bounds. To make the lesson more impressive, Germany adopted the American policy, and it has now almost over-taken its neighbor on the other side of the North sea. America had boundless undeveloped resources. boundless undeveloped resources. Germany was as deneely populated and almost as fully developed as Eng-land. These are the facts that have induced Joseph Chamberlain to strike at the English free trade dol, and the English free trade dot, and the struggle is of intense interest. The natural advantage is with the policy in vogue for fifty years, but even if it wins at first the irrepres-sible conflict must ultimately end in a victory for protection in England

Williams' Pink Pills and I strongly recommend them to all weak and ailing girls.'

Miss Jackson's experience should bring hope to all the weak, ailing girls and women. What those pills have done for her they will do for others. Every dose adds tone and vigor to the blood and nerves, brings a glow of health to sallow cheeks, a sparkle to the eyes and a ruby redness to pallid lips. No other medicine has done so much to bring comfort and health to weak girls and women. If you are ailing give the pills a fair trial and new health and strength will be yours. Do not accept any pink colored substitute; the genuine pills have the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pals People" printed on the wrapper around every box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere, or by mail at 56 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
