CHOICE LOTS FOR SALE

The lots still left in the Athletic Ground Survey are undoubtedly the best value offered in the city at the present time. Why is it that you can buy certain properties in the city to-day for about one-half of the original cost? Simply because some person was foolish enough to select a lot in an undesirable locality because it was cheap, and then build a good house on it. Such properties must be sacrificed when put on the market in order to affect a sale. Be Wise, Get a Good Location. The best residence property is always the cheapest. When you want to sell you will have scores of purchasers. The man who would build a good house on this property worth from $1,500 to $2,500 could readily dispose of it before it would be ready for occupancy, at an advance of $500 to $800, and still give the purchaser good value, as the actual value of these lots is certainly double what is asked for them. Call at the Business College to see the plans and get prices.—D. McCLACHLAN.

DUNDONALD WAS RIGHT

will be able to depose that the first man and the only man who brought any political question into that regiment was the Minister of Agriculture.

After quoting further from Mr. Fisher's statement to the effect that there had been political intriguing, Mr. Borden said that Senator Baker and Col. Smart had never exchanged a word in their lives and are not personally acquainted with each other.

Quoting from Lord Dundonald's memorandum, regarding the order given by the Minister of Militia to stop the organization of the regiment, Mr. Borden said no explanation had yet been given to the House as to how the Minister of Militia was induced to issue that order. It appeared, however, that the order was issued, stopping the organization of that regiment.

Mr. Borden then referred to certain extracts in Col. Smart's letters, showing the extent of Mr. Fisher's interference with the appointment of officers. Chief of these extracts was Colonel Smart's assertion that the Minister of Agriculture objected to the appointment of Dr. Pickell for no other reason than that the latter was a Tory.

STRONG POLITICAL OPPONENT—Mr. Borden was ready to block the whole organization, unless Dr. Pickell's name was withdrawn.

"Yet this is the man," said Mr. Borden, "in his first statement, at least declared that his interference was solely for the purpose of securing the appointment of properly qualified officers."

Mr. Borden showed also how Mr. Fisher had prevented the appointment of Capt. Converse, who had served in the militia for 15 years, and for a long time served as sergeant-major in the Duke of York's Hussars. Mr. Fisher asked that Capt. Converse, who was described as the best cavalry officer in Canada, be dropped, and substitute A. S. Adams, of the 6th Hussars, a man who is very deaf, and, in Col. Smart's opinion, wholly unfit for the position.

The Minister of Agriculture," said Mr. Borden, "seems to have regarded his own judgment as absolutely superior to that of experienced officers. He thought himself much more competent and much more qualified to select officers, having regard to military qualification, than were the experienced military men whom this country paid to discharge that duty."

Mr. Borden explained the nature of the duties conferred on the General Officer Commanding by statute. His duty was not only the military command and discipline of the militia, but the recommending to the Minister of Militia of fit and proper persons for appointment to commissions in the militia. Was the G. O. C. in the discharge of his duties to be interfered with by the Minister of Agriculture? asked Mr. Borden.

Mr. Borden referred to certain documents related to the Dundonald matter that the Government had suppressed, and made particular mention of two letters written by Col. Whitley to the Minister of Agriculture on May 14th and 15th last.

Col. Whitley requests that these letters should not be brought down," Mr. Fisher answered. "They were marked 'private' by him, and he has requested that they be kept private."

"Has Col. Whitley made that request by letter or orally?" asked Mr. Borden.

"By telephone to-day," replied Mr. Fisher.

Mr. Borden commented on the extraordinary circumstances that important letters relating to the organization of the regiments should be withheld from Parliament.

simply because Col. Whitley, an officer paid by the country for his services, thinks they should not be brought down.

"From what I have heard of Col. Whitley," said Mr. Borden, "I would not believe that he would write letters which he was not willing to have placed before the House, unless he was led into some specious intrigue by the Minister of Agriculture, which he might not be willing to disclose."

Mr. Borden asked the Minister of Militia to explain why he stopped the organization of the regiment after it was begun. Was it not the Minister of Agriculture who caused the delay? He showed how Mr. Fisher had taken an active part in suppressing the appointments, and that the organization of the regiment having been stopped, was not resumed. Still the Minister of Agriculture so fixed matters that no recommendations could be made without his consent. Col. Smart had finally come to Ottawa in despair, prepared to accede to the demands of the Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Borden recited some passages from letters written by Col. Smart to Mr. Fisher, after the latter had insisted on supervising the appointments. Notable among these was the following:—

"Agreeable to your request at our interview last Friday I now enclose herein, memo. showing my establishment."

Another passage read:—

"The only available veterinary surgeon I know is Dr. Dyer, of Sutton. Would he be acceptable to you? I would be glad to hear from you as soon as possible about this matter to enable me to complete my staff."

At the reading of these extracts the Opposition laughed uproariously.

The order-in-council of May 19th striking out the name of Dr. Pickell, bore these significant words in pencil: "Minister is to fix this."

"He has been fixing it all along," commented Dr. Sprule.

TRIBUTE TO DUNDONALD.

Mr. Borden closed with an earnest tribute to the work of Lord Dundonald. Lord Dundonald had had a distinguished career. He had come to Canada with an honorable record, and he would leave the country with that honorable record. — Conservative cheers. Lord Dundonald had necessarily taken strong measures, and he did not shrink from the consequences. He had been hampered, impeded, thwarted and misrepresented. Finding his usefulness gone, Lord Dundonald had made the speech in Montreal so as to arouse public opinion.

"Lord Dundonald can afford to treat with disdain the gibes and sneers of those who, during the past two years, have been willing to accord him the praise which his services demand," said Mr. Borden. "He has the respect of the men who served under him."

Mr. Borden then proposed the resolution above referred to.

Mr. Fisher's reply was spread over a couple of hours. It is not a definite but a bold justification of his course in interfering with the organization of the 13th Dragoons, because, as he held, it was being organized as a Tory preserve.

Mr. Monk paid a high tribute to Lord Dundonald's record and ability, and quoted Sir Frederick Borden's public testimonial to that effect, delivered only a few months ago. He cited constitutional authority to show that Mr. Fisher was not legally acting as Minister of Militia when he undertook to interfere with Lord Dundonald's recommended list of officers.

Sir Frederick Borden's speech of nearly three hours' duration was largely a fierce attack upon Lord Dundonald, whom he accused of having hired a reporter to take down his speech at the Montreal banquet—an assertion which was greeted by a loud demonstration of dissent from the Opposition. Sir Frederick then went on to refer to Lord Dundonald's speech at Montreal, which he spoke of as having been contemplated for weeks and months before it was delivered. He spoke of Lord Dundonald as acting a double part, and said the people of Canada did not want public servants of that kind. He then ridiculed Lord Dundonald's manifesto as a more concentrated exhibition of egotism than can be found in the English language. The minister, in the course of his further remarks, spoke of Lord Dundonald as acting a double part and as not considerate of the absolute literal truth of the statements he made. Sir Frederick declared that Lord Dundonald had gone to the London camp in defiance of his public suggestion that it was inadvisable for him to leave Ottawa. Lord Dundonald, he said, had replied that as he hadn't been ordered not to go he would go, and he went.

Col. Hughes moved the adjournment of the debate, and the House rose at 12.30 a. m.

few words to them. There is no doubt about the fact that we have class legislation in Canada. The professional and business men are protected, but I claim that there are three classes of men who are neglected. They are farmers, mechanics and laborers. I expect to, at some other time, be able to discuss these questions with you. I claim that if you farmers expect to get what you deserve you will get a tariff on United States goods the same as they have on ours.

"I was raised a farmer and I am farming at the present time and so am in a position to know the needs of this great class. I am sorry to say that Mr. Stephens was not taken up the fight of the farmers and I am sorry he did not see fit to attend this meeting to-night for I would like to hear what he has to say."

Mr. Clements then closed his speech by thanking his hearers and appealing to them for their assistance. He was warmly applauded as he took his seat.
