

TRUE TO SELF.
By thine own soul's law learn to live,
And if men thwart thee, take no heed,
And if men hate, have no care;
Sing thou thy song and do thy deed.
Hope thou thy crown and pray thy prayer,
And claim no crown they will not give,
Nor bays they grudge thee for thy hair.

Keep thou thy soul-sworn steadfast oath,
And to thy heart be true thy heart;
What thy soul teaches learn to know,
And play out thine appointed part.
And thou shalt reap as thou shalt sow,
Nor helped nor hindered in thy growth,
To thy full stature thou shalt grow.

—Puckham Beatty.

GOOD ADVICE.
President Porter, of Yale college gave the following closely packed advice to his students:—Inscribe on your banner "Luck is a fool, pluck is a hero." Keep at your helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Don't practice too much humanity. Think well of yourself. Strike out. Assume your own position. Put potatoes in your cart, over a rough road, and the small ones will go to the bottom. Rise above the envious and jealous. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers which move the world. Don't drink. Don't chew. Don't smoke. Don't swear. Don't deceive. Don't read novels. Don't marry until you can support a wife. Be in earnest. Be self-reliant. Be generous. Be civil. Read the papers. Advertise your business. Make money and do good with it. Love your God and fellow-men. Love truth and virtue. Love your country and obey its laws.

A REVERIE.
Our days are as the grass,
Or like a morning flower,
When chilling winds sweep o'er the plain,
They will wither in an hour.

How vain and empty are things terrestrial. How void and vacant the whole earth seems to him who buys a plug hat for another man. We guess we can read the signs of the times in the torch-light procession, but we cannot. We guess on the general result, and then purchase a new overcoat for a total stranger, while we steer our own arms down into the mysterious linings of our three-year old coat and feel sad.

The sight of a new shining silk hat brings the tears to my eyes.

The American people devote too much thought and too much time to politics. If any man refers to politics in my house hereafter, I will set him up in the requisite business. The following notice is posted in the main hall, where visitors present their credentials:—

Parties referring to the late election in a light or flippant manner will please state before leaving, what size of coffin they wear, and whether they desire to be buried inexpensively or with pomp and éclat.
Estimates of pomp and éclat furnished on application.

I am no politician, and never was. I am just a plain, unassuming, but talented chap, with a tendency to converse freely on subjects that I don't know anything about. That is the reason why the aurora borealis will look down this season on a tall, amateur politician in my ward, wearing the same underclothing that he wore last winter.

I have no objection to allowing a professional politician the privilege of betting on election results, but it's poor business for a man of letters. The literati ought to abstain from it. John Bunyan never guessed on Indiana and got left, did he? He was no guesser. He was a writer. Let every man attend to his own business, I say, and shun politics as he would the deadly upas tree.

I think the country ought to be saved, and am willing to do what is right, but I have gone out of the plug hat business. Parties who have countries that they would like to have saved will be attended to if they will call during office hours, but those who yearn for new clothes at my expense will please call while I am in New Orleans this winter delivering the opening address at the Cotton Carnival.

I visited an intimate friend over in Stillwater penitentiary, the other day, a friend named Younger, and I said to him: "Cole," said I, "You think you are a little unfortunate and hampered here, perhaps, but I think you are mighty fortunate. Of course, you can't go out much, and you have rather a monotonous time of it here, but you miss the cyclones and the elections. Your life is perfectly safe while your sentence lasts. After I had told him what I had passed through and had explained to him the political outlook and the price of plug hats, he wrung my hand and even smiled. When I left him he was singing softly to himself:—

"Oh, what shall the harvest be?"
