It will mean greater activity and more independence in the industrial life of the country.
It will mean new factories for the Cities and Towns of Canada.

AUSTRALIA'S NAVY.

Hon. George E. Foster, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, lately returned from Australia, recently gave an interview to the Toronto News dealing with several topics, including the new Australian ships of war. Touching these, Mr. Foster remarked that there was a good deal of misapprehension in Canada regarding the Australian fleet.

"A section of the press," he went on to say, "represented the Australian policy as being in exact accord with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy, and lent color to the impression that the Australian fleet had been built in Australia by Australian workmen, and that the Australian money had gone to pay for materials and labor in Australia."

"The fact is," he said, "that the first class cruisers Sydney and Melbourne, and three of the destroyers have been all built in British dockyards of material bought in Britain and by the labor of British workmen, paid for by Australia."

"It was thought that some of the lighter craft might be constructed in Australia. These are destroyers for which ready-made parts were sent to Australia and fitted together in the dockyards at Cockatoo Island. That, however, is scarcely to be called construction. Two other destroyers were being built in Australia while I was there. That is, the materials are all brought over from Great Britain and the construction in Australia consists of boring the holes and fitting the rivets, with maybe some shaping of the lighter parts. The third-class cruiser Brisbane was to have been built in Australia."

"And I see by the latest cablegrams that all the other parts of the fleet mentioned above are now in Australian waters after having been constructed in Great Britain, while the parts for the cruiser Brisbane, which was to have been built in Australia, have not yet been sent from Great Britain and in consequence the Brisbane will be one or two years behind time in completing the Australian unit."

"Then again it is made to appear that the Australia fleet unit is a synonym for the construction proposed under Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy. This is incorrect, because the Australia fleet is a complete unit. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's would not have been complete. Nor has any question ever been raised as to passing over control of the Australian unit in time of Empire war. It is as well that these differences should be noticed when our people are discussing the question of the naval policy."

"It thus appears that there is no similarity between the Australian fleet and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposed fleet. The latter is merely for purposes. Nor is there any real difference between the Australian ships and those proposed for Canada by Mr.
Borden. Both had to be built in British dockyards. The facts regarding the attempt to build the third-class cruiser Brisbane, in Australia, furnish a lesson and a warning, rather than example to be hastily followed. Mr.
Borden's arrangements for the gradual work of warship construction in Canada, were evidently all that could be practically useful."

BRITISH COMPULSORY NATIONAL SERVICE.

For several years now the veteran Lord Roberts has been persistently calling public attention to the present unsatisfactory state of the British army, and declaring that it was quite unfit to cope with any enemy which might be pitted against it. On the other hand, Lord Chancellor Haldane is never tired of calling attention to the alleged success of the army reforms which he introduced while Secretary of War; but he never tries to answer Lord Roberts. A sufficient number of recruits is not being got for any branch of the national service, which apparently has become unpopular. This state of matters must be remedied somehow. In a long and able article in the last British Review Sir Henry Craik maintains it can only be done by adopting compulsory service. He appeals to the nation to "brace itself to a task which is too high for those who guide its policy conspire"—the task of offering in a manner which will convince both political parties, that the time has come when some form of compulsory military training is necessary, and that the nation is prepared to make the sacrifices entailed by such service.

Admitting for argument's sake that the necessity exists the question arises how can the nation move in the matter except through the Government of the day. Sir Henry says the task is "too high" for it. Excepting the Government of the day there is no other power which can, effectively, or practically, move in the matter. If the nation declares for some form of compulsory service, similar to that in force in Germany, or something else, the Government of the day alone can introduce it. Even Sir Henry with all his loud talk would be powerless to do it.

Conscription is very unpopular in Britain, and many think that it can continue to get along very well without it, and that it is an unwarranted assumption that the necessary numbers and the necessary amount of training can only be got through compulsion, "with justice to every member of the community." The Territorial Force is at present short of its establishment, but it has been starved financially, and has never had a fair trial. The War Office, too, as a condition of its limited training, insists on financial sacrifices which it should not be called upon to make.
Compulsion may be ultimately necessary, but not before the voluntary system be given a fair trial. The failure of the voluntary system hitherto may well be attributed to the failure of the Government adequately to support it.

In East Middlesex this week Mr.
Frank Glass, for the Conservatives, and Mr. R. G. Fisher, for the Liberals, were put in nomination for the election to the House of Commons which takes place on Tuesday next. The chances are that Mr. Glass will be returned by a good majority. The constituency is Conservative by tradition, and if it were not, some of the narrower appeals addressed to the voters of Chateaufort would ensure its going against Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the first opportunity.

A Prince Albert man who accidentally shot his companion dead while out hunting has been fined $500, has had his shooting license cancelled and is debarred from hunting for ten years, under a new provincial law.
The lesson should have a good effect in Saskatchewan. Hence the sportsmen in that province will probably look twice before potting at the bushes when the wind mingles the leaves. The excuse that a man looked like a rabbit or a bear does not mean acquittal.

Mary Stuart, Monday.
One of the most important feature productions which the Gaiety Theatre has secured to date will be shown on Monday in the special three part Edison photoplay entitled Mary Stuart, adapted from the drama of Frederick Schiller. This special feature with Mary Fuller in the title role showing the tragic fate of the beautiful Mary in the plots which precede it, form a story of gripping intensity, while it is an acknowledged fact that the life of Mary Stuart, Queen of France and Scotland and pretender to the throne of England, formed one of the most dramatic chapters in the history of England. A special matinee will be given at 2:30.

STOCK MARKET QUOTATIONS TODAY

(By private wires of J. C. Macintosh & Co., Brokers, Queen St., Fredericton.) New York, Oct. 18.—The attempts to rally prices yesterday were renewed this morning. Some of the minor stocks, however, either failed to respond or were laggards. The dealings have been professional as the recent decline did not stimulate prices to any extent. The expectation of amendments to the currency bill had some influence, and reports regarding general business conditions have been more favorable than expected. To this can be added the item of domestic exports for September, showing an aggregate of upwards of $107,000,000, compared with a little less than $85,000,000 in the same month last year, and less than $96, 000,000 in August 1911. At the close the market showed no change in its trend. If anything the spontaneity at the opening was slightly lacking.

MARITIME BAPTIST CONVENTION OPENS

Amherst, N. S., Oct. 17.—Baptists are in possession of Amherst for the next six days, as the delegates have assembled from the churches throughout the Maritime Provinces in their annual convention. Many pastors and delegates are already on hand and others are marching in by every train.
Nearly four hundred delegates are expected. The convention proper opens tomorrow at ten o'clock. Today's sessions are those of the Baptist Institute, which is an open forum for the discussion of live religious, social and theological subjects, and everybody is free to take part.
The institute opened at ten o'clock, the president, Rev. J. E. Wilson, in the chair. After a helpful devotional service by the president, Rev. C.
Freeman, of Canis, N. S., read an able paper on the pastor his own evangelist. This paper showed scriptural precedents for the use of the instruments of the church, and the advantages of this method of working.
The pastor's responsibility was emphasized and the consequent necessity of some things was pointed out, among others, that he give what he preaches, that he be a man of prayer, have a firm faith in God's Word, and a practical knowledge of men.

INSANITY GROWS IN THE DOMINION

Smallest Percentage of Defec-tives Found in the Province of New Brunswick.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—A bulletin just issued by the census and statistics office gives the result of enumeration of the defective census in Canada—blind, deaf and dumb, insane and idiot—in the census of 1911.
The number of blind was 3,238; of deaf and dumb, 4,581; of insane, 14, 702; and of idiotic 5,387, making a total of defectives of 28,911, of which 15,330 were males and 13,581 were females.

From 1901 to 1911 the population increased by 34.17 per cent, for the same period the total number of infirm increased from 26,148 to 28,911, an increase of 8.42 per cent in the decade.

In Canada in 1911 there were 100 males to every 75 females incapacitated through blindness.
In 1901 there were 6,165 blind persons per 10,000 of population. In 1911 the proportion had fallen to 4,193 per 10,000. Deaf and dumb persons constituted 11,608 per 10,000 of population in 1901. The proportion in 1911 was 6,361.

In every ten thousand of the population in 1901 there were 31,014 insane and idiotic persons, the proportion fell to 28,847 in the year 1911.

There has been an increase in actual numbers and in proportion of the population of unsound mind in every province excepting New Brunswick.
The highest proportion is shown by Prince Edward Island, with 41,717 per 10,000 of the population, followed by Ontario with 34,998 per 10,000, Nova Scotia with 3,615, and Quebec with 32,443 per 10,000.

Tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth—if you want trouble.

If all prayers were answered the majority of men would quit work.
