puted, both by theologian and philosopher. Astronomy first shook its stability. It pointed, by its descope, to a Dearway, and proved to a certainty that these little and stable and sailed again on Tuesday morning or little and the provided as our own, and greater, many of them. With that in view, a literal interpretation of some parts of the Mosaic account does not read well. It gives this earth a superiority and pre-eminence that are altogether importable.

Sir;

If judge correctly of the Charlottetown Press, I believe its directors will readily publish any information intended to serve the interests of humanity, I make no apology, therefore, in submitting to you the "Rules" of Dr. Marshall Hall, for restoring Drowned Persons, or, for restoring suspended animation from other causes. If these Rules can be so printed in your columns as to admit of being "cut out" and pasted on a piece of board, or in a book, to be kept at hand as "household words," important benefit may result on some fature emergency; the subject is fraught with aniversal interest, and should be made familiar to every person, not knowing how soon the saving or losing of human life may depend, under Providence, apon his or her knowledge of the best method to restore it. My observations apply to non-medical persons, who may be called to act where medical aid cannot be procured, and where much may be done before the medical man arrives.

The labours of Dr. Marshall Hall, in Physiological science, bear so largely upon the public gratitude, that with your permission, I will send you a short digest of them for publication in a fature issue of your paper.

I am respectfully,

H. A. JOHNSON.

My dear Sirs,—I accept with gratitude your valuable present. As an indication that you appreciate my efforts to elevate and mould your moral natures, your gift is highly-encouraging. This excellent work embracing a wide range of literature, will be found especially useful as one of reference. I trust that our future intercourse will exhibit a growing expansion of intellect, a deepening delight in the acquisition of all truth, and a steady approach to that purity of heart and serenity of mind which make the renovated man. Your kind wishes for the happiness of Mrs. Sutherland and myself are thankfully acknowledged.
