"The forest situation on the whole continent is equally alarming and in the United States even an embargo on manufactured lumber is being urged. For while the United States has four times the amount of standing timber there is in Canada at the present time, their consumption and destruction is correspondingly greater. U.S. Government reports show an truction is correspondingly greater. U.S. Government reports show an annual loss in that country by fire of over ten million acres. Their best authorities state that the yearly loss for the Month of November— tat the plant formerly known as vauls the loss by fire, which means Highest Standing in Grades

It may be argued that there is some duplication in the loss from fire, but that is more than allowed for by the fact that large acres of the remaining timber are of poor and indifferent quality and are in inaccessible loca-tions, so that on large areas the stand of timber will never be available for consumption. And in addition to these facts many fires are never reported, reither is the full amount of the cut ever recorded, which facts will more than provide for duplications in burn-ed or other areas. And as the water table lowers in the earth and the surface of this continent becomes drier each succeeding year from the de-nudation of these millions of acres, our fire losses on this continent are continually increasing with only slight variations over limited areas caused by unequal rainfall.
