Dreadful Disaster. San Francisco Destroyed by Earthquake and Fire.

A most appalling disaster has overtaken San Francisco, California, by which the greater part of the city has been destroyed, and a great many lives have been lost and hundreds of thousands left homeless.

The property loss by fire and earthquake in San Francisco is probably a billion dollars. On this the insurance companies carried approximately $175,000,000 of insurance. The companies say they will pay all the insurance losses.

as serious as the first. For days the fires raged unchecked, and for a time it seemed as if the doomed city might be entirely wiped out.

With the city reduced to debris and smouldering ruins; with almost all the stores of provisions and centres of supplies wiped out, the hundreds of thousands of homeless people who barely escaped with their lives seemed for the time being to be face to face with starvation.

The civic, state and military authorities were fully alive to the seriousness of the situation, and knew that the spectre of famine confronted them.

Relief committees were promptly formed and all provision and grocery stores remaining were taken charge of, and such supplies as could in this way be procured were carefully distributed among the needy.

No sooner had the magnitude of the dreadful disaster become known than the whole world stood ready to lend assistance.

The United States Congress immediately voted one million dollars for relief of the stricken city. The Dominion Parliament at once voted one hundred thousand dollars.

Provisions and money are pouring in from all quarters as rapidly as they can be carried. Water supply and sanitation for these immense concentration camps, were for a time matters of considerable anxiety; but all these problems have now been pretty thoroughly solved.

Of course, a great many lives were lost; no one can tell how many. Some place the estimate at a thousand; but that is conjecture.
