By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"We are going to have a new car," said a friend of mine to me one day.

"That's fine," I said, trying to keep the surprise out of my voice, and evidently failing.

Less Luxury and Less Worry.

"You don't think so," she laughed.

"But I do. It's this way. We could just barely afford to run that large car. It was always running over the allowance we put aside for it, and I was always adding up bills, and feeling we ought not to use it so much. Of course, it was nice to have a luxurious car, but one day after a ride had been spoiled for me by some little accident I knew would cost a lot to repair, and a friend we had with us had told us how little that would cost on his car, it came over me that I would be happier on the whole with less luxury and less worry."

"Did John see it that way?" I asked.

"Not at first," she confessed.

"How did you persuade him?"

"John was hard to persuade."

"Well, I haven't wholly. It took a good deal of tact and our last bill of repairs even half to persuade him. He says 'It's only an experiment.'"

I met this woman again the other day and at once inquired about the experiment. She said it had become permanent, and I congratulated her. For it seems to me they have set their feet on the road to happiness. Another young couple whom I know had a big raise once. The first day or two they talked much of what they would buy—a piano, a new set of living room furniture, even by economizing an auto. I asked her later what they had decided upon.

All They Bought Was Peace of Mind.

"Oh, a few little things we need," she said, "and after that, just peace of mind."

"You mean—"

"That I'd rather have a comfortable margin for extras than anything else I could buy."

When standards rise faster than incomes you get misery; when standards keep constant pace with income you get discontent and uneasiness; when standards are rigidly kept (they don't do it of themselves) a little below income, you get peace of mind and contentment.

And what in all the world is there better?

What are you doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing. I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

The English Army Scandal.

The action of the British Government in the case of Mrs. William Cornwallis-West, wife of a landed proprietor and a woman of enormous social influence, may fairly be said to mark the beginning of a new epoch. The world has been dimly aware of the evil influence exerted not only upon the army and navy, but upon public life and officialdom generally, by intriguing women of high social position. But the tendency of the English has always been to suppress such scandals, as far as possible, even to punishing moral offenders whose rank, with the mistaken idea that publicity by weakening the faith of the people in the social structure supported by the hallowed British Constitution, would work ill to the nation. On no other hypothesis can we explain the persistence with which social misdeeds affecting the conduct of public business have been ignored by the authorities for a full generation.

But the end of this complacent acceptance of the wickedness and folly of aristocracy has come. Great Britain is at war, its very existence is threatened, and its people, as whole-some morally, as clean-minded and sound-hearted a race as ever inhabited a fair part of this globe's surface, will no longer tolerate the aristocratic vampires and meddlers whose misdeeds may tend to derange the vital forces of the nation. The case of Mrs. William Cornwallis-West is a warning to all the social meddlers who use their positions, their wealth, and their charms, physical or intellectual, to corrupt public servants. The army has been more notoriously the prey of such persons than any other department. It is right, with a great war in progress which the nation is determined to prosecute to the end with undiminished energy, that an offense against army discipline should be thus summarily treated.

As The London Daily News says, the unexonerated army officers in-involved in this discreditable affair have been weak and foolish rather than criminal, but they are officers of high rank except the humble and innocent Lieutenant of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, whose entanglement through no fault of his own, in an unsavory romance was the cause of all the trouble. Needless to say, the punishment of the culpable officers by the publication of the report of the court of inquiry is sufficient. But it is not this particular scandal that is so significant at this crisis. It is the notice given to the peccant minority of the British aristocracy, to all British society, and to the world at large that England has become wholly serious and is controlled by one great purpose.—N. RELIEF COMING.

WALT MASON

The winds are blustering and rough, the frost keeps at it, steady; a little winter is enough, you've had your share already. You're tired of winter, grim and drear, you're tired of all his poses. Cheer up! The spring will soon be here, with the nightingales and roses! You're tired of blowing in your nose that you may keep from freezing, for cords of wood and tons of coal—it surely isn't pleasing. You're tired of toiling day by day, to feed the hungry heaters. Cheer up! The spring is on the way, with meadow larks and skeeters! You're tired of falling half a block, when streets with ice are slippery; you're tired of cleaning snowy walks, and other labors dippy. You faint would sound a note of grief, with cymbals, timbrels, cornets. Cheer up! The spring will bring relief, and bobalinks and hornets. Cheer up! Though gloomy be the day, the darkest day will vanish; there's something traveling our way that will cure our troubles. To-day may be a thing of dread—we're banking on tomorrow; there's always something just ahead that's bound to knock out sorrow.

Samp cooked in the usual way and sprinkled with grated cheese, is an agreeable dish.

Flattering to the Original

But Imitations Only Disappoint. There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough. They usually have some sale on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

This is a facsimile of the package bearing portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D.

What a Gas Range Means for You, Mrs. Housekeeper.

The gas range is a muscle saver and a step saver. Think of the many tons of coal you used in that coal range, and how you have had to handle it all twice; first, carrying it up out of the cellar; then, from the kitchen to the ash barrel.

No more soot to wipe away; no more ashes to cart away; no more wood to fetch; no more coal dust; no more smoke and no more reason why the kitchen cannot be kept as clean and as orderly as the parlor. The gas range means just this.

Saves 50 Per Cent. of Kitchen Cares.

Half of the labor in the house is caused by dust from the coal range. Every time it smokes, no matter how good the draught may be, clouds of ashes rise and settle on the furniture.

It Eliminates Hard Work.

Use a gas range and you will live better, you will play better, and you will work better because the use of the gas range eliminates the drudgery of carrying coal, ashes and the chopping of kindling, as well as the drudgery of cleaning up a lot of dirt, and, best of all, for the cook it makes it unnecessary for her to stand over a hot stove from two to three hours a day.

Marooned in Elevator.

Stock Was Going Up While Imprisoned Speculator Thought It Was Going Down, and He Made $5,000.

(Toronto News.)

Many strange stories are going the rounds regarding small fortunes which have been made during the recent fluctuations of the world's stock markets. Perhaps the strangest story in some years is that of a speculator who was imprisoned between the floors of a local skyscraper when the car was marooned there through the power failing. He had seen on the ticket that one of his holdings was at a high level. Immediately he decided to sell and raced for the elevator in a hurry to get to his broker.

The market looked a little erratic and time meant everything. When about half way to the street the lights in the car commenced to flicker, the car slowed down and as the lights made their final spurt before going out the car stopped, between two floors. Beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead and fear gripped his heart, but try as he would he could not force the operator to move the car to the next floor. After putting in the worst twenty minutes in his life the lights commenced to burn dimly, but still the car would not move as the switches had to be set in the elevator room. Finally after another few minutes the car started and he was landed safely at the street. Feeling sure he was a big loser he made a grand rush for the broker's office, scattering everything that happened to get in his way. "Sell my holdings at 194," he shouted at the broker, when only half way through the door.

"Why sell at 94 man, when the stock has been selling at 99 for the past five minutes?" queried the broker. In place of losing by the delay the party in question, who is well known in financial circles, was made richer by about $5,000, and so another was added to the list of "lucky ones."
