The G. T. R. and C. P. R. Companies [Special to The Advertiser via G. N. Firm in Their Decision-What Manager Hays and Mr. The following dispatch was received Nicoll Say.

A few days ago Mr. Thos. Tait, assistant general manager of the C. P. R., wrote Secretary Nelles, of the London Board of Trade, acknowledging the receipt of the board's resolution relative to the withdrawal of certain so-called excursion privileges.

The matter was referred to Mr. D.

W. Nicoll, passenger traffic agent, and a letter has just been received by Mr. John Gibson Brings Boarding Nelles from him stating: "The suburban market ticket which the resolution refers to has been a source of trouble to us in the past. While no doubt merchants in the places to which such market tickets are issued are in favor of same, the merchants at the places from which they are issued are not, and there is considerable doubt as to whether they are really favorable to the company or not. It was there-fore after a good deal of consideration we decided to cancel them and not endeavor to force the business from any one locality to another. Applications were reaching us from all over asking similar privileges for certain towns, as we granted to London and other quent upon the indisposition of Judge places, and we could not see our way to comply with all these requests. would like to assure your board that we have not singled out London esbut have canceled all the market tickets throughout our line, every towns and city being treated in exactly the same way.

A copy of the resolution was also forwarded Manager Hays of the G. T. R., and he replied that having given the matter very careful consideration before taking action thereon he did not feel the company could consistently make any change in the regula-tions as at present existing, and in tions as at present existing, and in order that the board might under-vow there's something in that that ow differently the action is re-by other very large and im-a fellow on that! It's enough to kill garded by other very large and important interests of the company, he quoted a resolution received a day or on the woman? two ago from one of the flourishing towns not very far distant from London. It was as follows: "That the thanks of this board be tendered to Mr. C. M. Hays, general manager of the G. T. Smart Savings Carefully Prepared -Sheridan's Unique Plan-Phrase Makers.

It is said of Richard Brinsley Sheridan that he used to lie in bed in the morning and think of smart things to say to his acquaintances in the course of the day, and when by carefully guiding the channel of conversation he managed to work off his deliberatelyplanned impromptus no man ever more keenly enjoyed the tributes to his spontaneity of wit. People who usually think of smart things to say from half an hour to a day and a half after they ought to have said them have generally a high admiration for clever rejoinders, but in not a few cases these models of repartee with the speaker, old saws dulled with long use. When Roscoe Conkling was making his famous speech, the one by which he is best remembered, in nominating Gen. Grant for the Presidency, he was frequently interrupted by pol itical opponents in the convention. With keen sarcasm he turned to the presiding officer and remarked: "I presume, Mr. President, this will not come out of my time." The suggestion implied, that the interruptions were nothing to him, so long as his allowance was not curtailed, was greatly admired, but in 1861, when a member of the House, he used the same remark when interrupted by Southern members in the course of a speech he was delivering, and, no doubt, seeing its effect, treasured it for future utterance.

There probably never lived an orator who could deliver a good speech with-out previous preparation. It is told of Senator Hoar that when making impromptu remarks he sometimes, hesitating in the use of words, uses three of four nearly synonymous, ere the proper one comes to his tongue. Such speaking as this is really impromptu; a finished oration, with flowing periods and bright imagery, never is. Cicero's fierce oration against Cataline, apparently inspired by the audacious presence of the conspirator in the Senate House, was, no doubt, carefully prepared beforehand, for Cicero knew that Cataline would be there and who can tell that the orator had given a outside, watch for the enemy, come in and wink, as a sign that it was time his tribe. Besides this, he was a philosopher, too, and may be called were prepared, we do know that, as the language was his own. But after numerous that the world can afford to despise them. We could get along somehow without them, but if they help us to understand what has been less plainly said by their predecessors they have not labored in vain.—[St.
