'I wish it were in my power to exorcise even more of your cynicism and faithlessness; perhaps, however, if you possessed fewer of the characteristics of the ancient philosopher whom you have quoted, you might in time come to believe that there is, after all, much of goodness as well as evil in the world."

"He shook his head sadly."

"He shook his head sadly.

Why should Laura Pomeroy start and lose color as Max repeated this?
But she did, however, and so violently that the heavy steel crochet-hook with which she was working fell clattering to the floor.

Max sprang to recover it for her, and wondered to see how pale she had suddenly grown; though perhaps it was caused by the shadow of the green draperies behind her, he thought.

She thanked him with her brightest smile, while as she looked into his fine cause the color came surging back to her eyes the color came surging back to her

"I never knew of any one so called," Mrs. Remington responded. "There may have been distant connections of whom I was in ignorance, and a 'Dexter' among them. That was my husband's middle name, though he never used it, always writing simply the initial 'D.' He had been so named after an uncle, whose property he inherited. Possibly this man may have known him," she this man may have known him," she concluded, with sudden thought.

"Then, of course, the man could not have been my husband's uncle, for he, I have been told, was one of the most exemplary of men," Mrs. Remington said, decidedly.

"I then told him I would get out at the next crossing, and asked him to please give me his address."

Laura, however, had not appeared to hear what Max had said about this accident. When he had told his companion's name she had given another violent start, and then fallen into a profound reverie.

"Archibald!—Joseph Archibald did you say his name was?" she now asked, turning toward the young man.

"He told me to inquire at No. 10—Court for Joe Archibald," Max replied.
"I took it for granted that the Joe stood for Joseph, it may, however, stand for archly. "Oh, no; it is of no consequence,"

Laura returned, trying to speak indifferently; but, had her companions been more observant, they would have seen she was trembling violently, while there was a gleam in her dusky eyes which told that she had made some important discovery through the medium of that name, and also the name of Dexter, which had previously agitated her. "I am very sorry that the poor old gentleman was so badly hurt," Mrs. Remington feelingly remarked.

THE GRAND CIRCUIT. Detroit, Mich., March 20.-President Daniel J. Campau will soon issue a Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, but at first call for the meeting of the stewards of the Grand Circuit in New York. The meeting will be set for some day early in May, and at this meeting, war to the knife may be framed up with the National Trotting Association. President Campau said today: "The stewards of the Grand Circuit feel that the National Association is no longer fit to act as a governing body, and sooner or later the split will come. The National Association are to form a trust to control all racing in the United States. It recently adopted a rule known as No. 16, which will disqualify any owner, trainer or driver from performing on any track penalized by the National Association. That rule places that body in a position where it can oust any track that comes under its displeasure." Under the system of proxies the National Association has long held the whip hand of the situation, and has arbitrarily dictated to the stewards, men who own the greatest horses in the world and this dictation is by the proxies who have no interest in tracks, horses, or anything pertaining to the racing sport. It is the opinion that the meeting to be called by President Campau, the Grand Circuit will be cut away thousands of just such cases as that from the National Trotting Associa-AT NEW ORLEANS.

Is more common than we may think, if we define gluttony as eating beyond the body's need of sustenance and beyond the stomach's capacity for digestion and assimilation of food. That is a fair definition, and it fastens the name glutton on many a person who would resent the term as an insult. The fact of this gluttony is marked by its consequences. The overloaded stomach becomes diseased. The popular term for the condition is "weak" stomach. The "weak" stomach fails in furnishing adequate nutrition for the body, and soon the "weakness" spreads from the stomach to other

I cannot forget how I felt when I took it; I was suffering everything with indigestion, and my stomach was so bloated that it seemed as though it must burst. My husband said he was going for the doctor, but I said if he would get me a bottle of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I would try that. I had not taken it long when I felt relieved, and have not had a touch of indigestion or stomach trouble since. I had been sick for four years, and less than four bottles cured me. Some people that knew me before I began to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' tell me that they never saw such a change in any one, and they also say they don't see how I can do such large washings as I do now, when I had not done a washing for so long."

A Strange Story-Son of a Wealthy Brooklyn Man, Mourned by His Family as Dead, Has Just Been Heard From.

New York, March 20 .- After twelve years' imprisonment among the bushmen in Australia, Joseph J. Gill, son of the late Thomas Gill, a well-known Brooklyn manufacturer, has been heard from by his family, who had mourned him as dead.

Gill left home in 1886, and in 1893, his wife, believing him dead, married again.

On Aug. 17, 1886, Joseph J. Gill sailed from New York for Australia, where he had extensive mining interests. The miles were situated about 500 miles from Sydney, and Gill expected to be gone two or three years. He left behind a wife and two children, boys of and 5 years, respectively.

For two years letters were received egularly. His mining interests were prospering and he hoped soon to return to the United States, he wrote in his

A period in which no tidings were received from Mr. Gill followed, and then came a letter from the American consul at Sydney, N. S. W., stating that Joseph Gill, a wealthy mine operator, and four companions, had been ambushed and killed by Australian bushmen, in Australia, not far from the mines which the Brooklyn man controlled. This was the last heard from Gill until the news of imprisonment, which has just been received. It came in the form of a letter to Inspector McLaughlin, of the Brooklyn police. The letter, dated Dagupan, Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands, was written in November, 1901, and addressed to the chief of police of Brooklyn. It was as fol-

"In 1886 I left my home in Brooklyn for Australia, where I was held a captive in the interior by bushmen until two years ago. I then came to these islands and entered the campaign with Macabebe scouts. Prior to Aguinaldo's capture I was severely wounded, and I am afraid am a cripple for life. I am now making my way back to Sydney, Australia, to my wife and children.

"I do not know if my dear mother is dead, but would be glad to know her address, if she is alive, or my brothers. I shall be in Sydney by the time you receive this letter. Please address me in care of the United States consul at Sydney.'

The Brooklyn police had little difficulty in finding Gill's mother. Cable messages were at once sent to Gill at
