They were successful in find-ing in the sand, just about where the boat was launched, the pair of rowlooks, still tied together. The sail was found a few days ago not far from the San Pedro wreck. From all indications, it is now believed that Mallandaine had launched his boat ready for the start and left it secure as he thought while he went for his outfit, but that while he was getting this a short distance away the tide took the boat off, and hastly stripping of his top clothing he plunged in after it, only to become so numbed by the cold water that he was helpless after climbing into the boat. The oars and the valuable shot gun and rifle, as well as his clothes, are still missing, but possibly have been found by Indians.

"CROSSED THE BAR."

Who in these parts during the last thirtyseven years has not known Capt. Tom Wright? The genial old Captain passed over to the side of the great majority about 11 o'clock yesterday morning at Seattle. Capt. Wright, who came to this province in 1858 with his father, engaged in steamboating, and his experience in that line was a varied one. "Captain Tom," as he was familiarly known by old-timers on the Pacific Coast, was among the first to navigate a steamer to Hope and Yale. After operating in these waters for several years, in conjunction with his brothers, J. T. and George S. Wright, he built the Olympia, now the Princess Louise, and the Wilson G. Hunt, at present in the bone-yard. These steamers were intended to run on the Sacramento river, but were afterwards brought to this province. Capt. Tom, after leaving the last mentioned steamer, became interested in and was captain of the first ateamer that plied in the Upper Fraser in the season of 1863 -the Eaterprise - which ran between Soda Creek and the mouth of for sixty miles.

After 1863 Captain Wright decame owner of a neat little steamer, Diana, which also plied in these waters and those of Puget Sound, and many is the story told of Captain Tom's hospitality. It was during his captain Tom's hospitality. It was during his captain Tom's broadside," was first heard. The captain Tom's broadside," was first heard. The captain rendered very valuable service to the United States government during the to the United States government during the time of his ownership of the Diana. He was always on hand when there was any. thing to be done.

In later years Capt. Tom became part owner and took charge of a boat that played an important part in the trade between the headwaters of the Sound and the city of Victoria. This vessel was the Eliza Anderson, which performed a very good semi-weekly service from this city to Olympia. This was in the days of old, when the Kingston, Sehome and Rosalie were not plying six times a week between Victoria and Sound ports. Capt. Wright was born on February 22, 1828, in the city of New York, into the old men's home of Geo. Good, 64 years old and for 26 years a resident of Vic-girls, and a host of friends who will long the week, before the evening paper is published," he inquires whether such lads as these attend the public schools, and, if so, with guns and explosives nothing more could whether they are proper companions for the happen to her than to be condemned, girls of the city.

With respect to the first question, I may state that I have reason to believe that there is a considerable number of boys in this city who do not attend the public schools. Clause 66 of the School act pro. vides for the compulsory attendance at some school of "every child, from the age of seven to twelve inclusive." Unless, then, the lads referred to in His Lordship's letter are not older than the maximum age affected by intendent Hutchisen says he can make the matter right without much trouble, it was not quite fair to assume that they attend any public school. Granted, however, for nasty mudholes opposite her property, 162 and 164 Pandora street, be fixed, as her tenants have threatened to leave otherwise. Referred to streets committed.

they sit at their deaks at school. A victous boy in school is really not unlike a victous man in a drawing-room. Each will be seen in his respective place disguised in a cleak of outward respectability. The vice is there, but it is not apparent, and consequently not hurtful. De non apparentibus know who was to pay the damages as the t non existentibus eadem est ratio.

their teachers or to their parents if they have any complaint to make. This the boy knows full well, and this makes him cantions for his own sake. And may not the restraint that forces him in school to curb any evil propensity he may have tend to mould his character gradually into a better shape, and to make him a better boy?

There is only one more point in the Bishop's letter to which I should refer. His Lorship uses rather too strong a word when he writes of the boys as "companions" of the girls. I speak for the High school when I say that the communication between the sexes during school hours (and that is the only time for which I am officially responsible) amounts only to necessary civilities. But I see no signs of companionship between boys and girls. Boys are the companions of boys, and girls of girls

In conclusion I would state that, during my experience in mixed schools of this proving e, no complaint has ever been made to me either by the girls under my charge or by their parents concerning the conduct of the boys. If the docket of our Police Magistrate were empty every morning it would be fair to argue from that fact that crime in this formation of a company to undertake this city did not exist. If our judges received the "customary white gloves" at every assize in the province, would doubte as to the morality of the population be tolerated? I contend that it is equally reasonable to suppose that, if no complaints as to the conduct of our pupils have ever been laid before me or my colleanges in the High school, the state of affairs there cannot be in a very unsatisfactory condition. And I would add that any one who can prove, by satisfactory evidence misconduct on the part of scholars in our public schools and who withholds such information as he may possess from the board of school trustees, the educational author-itiesor the principals of the schools, incurs a grave responsibility; and I trust that the Bishop of Columbia, or anyone else who may hear evil reports of our schools, will ask his informant the following question: "Knowing all this, have you done your best, by making this statement to the proper authorities, to remedy the evil ?"

Hon. C. E. Pooley, Q C, who appeared for the crown, stated that the Commanderin-Chief did not wish to press for forfeiture, but believed justice would be satisfied with he imposition of a fine. The Chief Justice was glad to hear that the prosecution represented by the Com-mander-in-Chief was of opinion that the case could be met with a fine. It seemed to the Court that this course would commend itself to one's reason. The vessel was condemned not for any direct violation of the statute, but because of the inference arising out of the act of 1893 that a vessel in prohibited waters with skins and implements would be unjust to meet such an offence as this with as heavy a punishment as if the vessel were caught in a flagrant violation of and it was rather hard to go to this extreme in the present case. VICTORIA SCORES ANOTHER WIN AGAINST THE NAVY. The second of the series of matches belivered last week, condemning the Shelby, and passed to Miller, who handed it on to improve the point, and Marriott re-started the game. The Navy forwards now seemed to wake up and took the ball down the field with some grand rushes, but could not get further than the home 25 mark. Play continued for some time to be of a give and take nature, the Navy having slightly the best of the scrimmages, while the Victoria outside division did some fine work. After about twenty minutes' play Miller got a clean pass from Smith, and after a fine run grounded the ball over the line. Goward took the kick, which was by no means easy, and succeeded in was by no means easy, and succeeded in scoring a premier point. From this to half time the play was very even, and when the interval was called the score stood, Victoria 8 points, Navy nil. Crease restarted the ball for Victoria, which was restarted by Databased and a company turned by Petch, and a scrimmage was formed in the centre. For some time the formed in the centre. For some time the Navy looked dangerous, their forwards using their weight to good advantage; but Miller relieved with a long kick, and the game was brought back to the centre field. The Victorias' forwards now did some fine dribbling, which carried into the Navy twenty-five, where Goward securing the ball from a long throw out by Smith secured the third try for Victoria. The Navy forced the game and by a series. The Navy forced the game and by a series of rushes carried the ball back in dangerous proximity to the Victoria touch line only to be returned by the steady play of the Vic-toria backs—when Miller taking a pass from Gamble in centre field again scored for the home team. Shortly after no side was called by the referee, the score standing 14 to nil in favor of Victoria. Hon. V. A. Stanley acted as referee with satisfaction to both sides.

On Thursday next the Victoria team will meet their old opponents, the Nanaimo Hornets, at Nanaimo, when a fine game is anticipated. Arrangements are being made with the E & N. railway for excursion rates so that lovers of football in Victoria will have a chance to see the game.

Ives undertook to play 3,000 points, 14 inch balk line, against 1,200 by Gallagher, and lost. He made 2,323 and was beaten 677 points. His play throughout the contest has not been of that steady character which has made him famous, but he beat the best run made in a balk line match, made marvellous shots and some in-comparable balk line nursing, and executed numerous astonishing position plays, although he made many misses when least expected. His unceedings was manifested last night His uneteadiness was manifested last night when he accomplished the unprecedented run of 483, anchor barred, yet only made 659 points in sixteen innings. But that run was a revelation. No other player in the world could have got into so many bad positions and continued playing. His first 150 were about as hard caroms as any player ever made continuously. The rest of the run was the result of brilliant general playing, interspersed with frequent periods of line nursing. Gallagher did not get going until the 14th innings, when he ran 90.
