The great majority of these shacks are atown, and after a visit to those which by the change in the aldermanic majority are allowed to escape condemnation, one cannot help thinking that when the committee first made ir report with the stench and sights Almost opposite the city market build-

38 Cormorant street.' Here though the two rooms down stairs were clean and very decently kept, there is no sewer connection and behind the rotten floors nastiness is very apparent. A stairway behind runs to the upper story and there in the little passage way is a wooden sink with a spout that conveniently empties slops outside and along the wall of the shack. There are several rooms upstairs which though yacant at present will no doubt be inand along the wait of the shade are several rooms upstairs which though vacant at present will no doubt be insabited when the Chinese come back down of itself. This is another lot which appears on the report as only fit to be destroyed.

They are just opposite the Chinasa with the condemned seventeen cabins are not nearly as chicationable. They are just opposite the Chinese mison church, and are all connected with the sewers. In No. 27 the floors and woodwork are greasy and black. The place is cut up into cubby holes of rooms, in one of which are bunks and blankets for four men, while underneath, ripening nicely in the unventilated atmos phere, were pears and other fruit which white people in Vietoria will no doubt buy before long. In one of the back rooms, a little black hole of a place with no window, were two men enjoying a pipe of opium. The next shack, a Chinese restaurant, was fairly clean and neat, with better rooms and fair ven-tilation; but just behind was a hen house, and some ducks had a nice dirty ula on application. The secret of its sucpond to enjoy themselves in, a miniature cess-pit. One of the most remarkable places was a room just behind No. 21. Here was a room totally in darkness, with the door shut, and a small window that, from the stuff piled up before it, was never opened nor intended to be opened. The door was opened by a blinking Chinaman who has with his wife spen fifteen years in that wretched room twelve feet square. He has apparently a little money and lives without having to work. No. 21 itself is a store in from with the general characteristics of its companions, sinking floors and unsavory these houses was roofed over as much a possible, and the ventilation cannot be good, especially as other little additions have been apparently made behind the houses from time to time as the erration Chinese fancy dictated.

In July last the city council decided to adopt the report of a special committee and the report of a special committee and the brick of the report of a special committee and the brick of the report of a special committee and the brick of the report of a special committee and the brick of the report of a special committee and the brick of the report of a special committee and the report of the report of a special committee and the report of a special committee and the report of a special committee.

In this the passage way is narrow and dark, while behind is what was once a inspector should be torn down as unfit closet, but is now used as a receptacle to be put in a sanitary condition. A for slops and other filth. With no sewer little later it was found that a techniconnection for this, the horrible mess the ground and then floods a space covered with boards used as a back land ent buildings were considered separately ing. Through the cracks in the boards at last week's meeting of the council, the liquid mass may be seen and the smell rises high enough to make one instinctively beat a retreat. The ground floor is bad enough, but upstairs still strong before them, they were not far out in their recommendations. tion, the vitisted air from below comes up the little stairway to a room with six heds in it. Add to this the fact that look at from the street, but a striking downstairs there is a sink whose only outlet is to drain into the ground under neath the building, and anyone may figure out what a nice place that would be to live in. No. 15 is a butcher shop with the same general characteristics, while No. 13 is a store in front and has some additions not contemplated by the fire limits bylaw, and the little alcove in the roof possible to put them in anything like good condition. In looking at the vast and rapid development of this rich mineral country, a question of great importance comes very forcibly before enterprising minds, and one that is thought well worthy of high consideration. That is the splendid market which Peru offers as an outlet for the coal of Vancouver island.

At the present time nearly all the coal consumed in Peru has to be imported from England or Australia, and one sees every week many large coal-laden and coke-laden ships arrive at Peruvian ports from both of these countries. Now, the question is: Why cannot the vast coal mines at Nanaimo and Wellington send coal to Peru at a cheaper rate than either England or Australia? The freight from England to Callao is nearly double what the freight would be from this island, and the freight from Australia to Callao is a country where the electric light is practically unknown, and the city of Lima depends almost solely upon gas for tits illumination, as also all the principal towns in that country, and for this purpose alone coal and coke is shipped in large quantities from England and Australia to Callao, Truxillo, Pisagua and like and the fireight from Lima depends almost solely upon gas for tits illumination, as also all the principal towns in that country, and for this purpose alone coal and coke is shipped in large quantities from England and Australia to Callao, Truxillo, Pisagua and nedicine that has brought health strength to thousands of others, and wh hope and encouragement came to me once more.
