REPORT EXAGGERATED.
The report of the near wrecking of the Ocean Limited at Moffat's publishthe Ocean Limited at Moffat's published in our last issue was greatly exagorated, but was published from information given by persons who addoubt thought their statements were correct. It appears that the temporary track around the wreck was all clear for the passage of the Limited, but as their were mails to transfer that train would have to stop. The signal to stop may not have been placed far enough distant and the engineer was obliged to pull up very suddenly, but had he run along the track was entirely clear.
