GLIMPSES OF ITS CASTLES; ITS CATHEDRALS; ITS ABBEYS, ITS TRADITIONS AND ITS RURAL LIFE.

THE JUBILEE. If for no other reason my trip to England this year has been to me invaluable in the proofs that I have seen displayed that England's methods are the correct ones for the higher civilization, where several problems will have their only and proper solution all along the way. Along these lines I have been so forcibly impressed by the grand exhibitions of good behavior on the part of the London multitudes on these Jubilee days, that I have been carried away into asking the cause and the why. Evidently the essence, the prime factor, is not the mere respect for conventional forms of behavior, and it is not a shallow polish. Giving the matter a wide range of thought, as it is presented to me in the history of the social and constitutional evolutions of the country, in its institutions, in its laws, in its shrines, in its provisions for public comfort, in its beauties of art as displayed in rural as urban England, and especially of the strides in all these particulars which have been made in the Victorian era, I am brought to the conclusion that, though John Bull has the name of being prosy and material, he has really the biggest heart on earth. Those elements of sympathy, sentiment, and magnanimity which are the prime*constituente of law, order, and ideals which make for the highest civilization, refinements, and delicious forms of private as well as public life, exemplifying the beauties of truth in practical activity, England is the main artery. I trust the reader will pardon this digression. (Continued.) pardon this digression.

the main artery. I trust the reader will pardon this digression.

It was quite a time after the people had become mostly seated, that the first of the procession appeared. This little time was filled in with happy episodes which kept the crowd in good spirits. Now and again there was a squad of troopers passing to get to their allotted positions. Then an officer galloped past. The very varied nationalities, appearances, and movements of these passers by, were the subject of many lively comments. The men who passed, were in the main, well mounted, and made a fine appearance. Sometimes there were amusing digressions from the rule, such as is seen in one of John Gilpin style going by. Then a shout of laughter runs along the line.

However these street scenes were not all to be credited to military element. There went by a young Welsh woman with a baby—a queer place, surely, for a baby. I knew she was Welsh by the way her shawl was fastened to support her precious burden. Directly another woman passed with a baby "in arms." Then a company of distinguished foreigners rode past. In all twenty-five European countries were represented here; thirteen American, and eight Asiatio and African. Of these, Munir Pashs, from Turkey and H. E. Chang Yew Hun, from China were of special note. The representative from China was a very sombre looking individual. Indeed nearly all of the representatives of the East wore grave faces—good subjects for study.

The police that day, as I found them to do all through this Jubilee season, gave all phases of society every opportunity possible to enjoy themselves. Until well up to the time of the first start of the processional movements, which consisted of the march of the colonial procession to positions at St. Pauls, two hours previous to that of the Royal Procession, the street was left to all kinds of sight seeing turnouts. A coal carrier's van loaded with his family gave merriment to the waiting crowd, and then a green grocer and his wife, in their business van with their happy and inter

The little interval was made enjoyable to the spectators. These men ear our stand, it is reported, started from their quarters at 3 o'clock in the morning. Some pitying individual lowered a bottle from a window mear our stand, to be handed to the thirsty troopers. Several followed until an officer appeared and stopped the fun. These proceedings were lustily cheered.

The Colonial Procession passed our stand about nine o'clock. This was in command of Lord Roberts in Field Marshall's uniform. This officer is very popular, both with the soldiers and citizens. The Colonial Premiers, who drove in order with the troops of their arrangements for the Fast Line between Canada and Great Britain. who drove in order with the troops of the soldiers and citizens. The Colonial Premiers, who drove in order with the troops of their respective colonies, met with an enthusiastic reception. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the subject of many a cheer. His polite bows produced, we are told, a repetition of cheers all along the line. The procession halted just as Sir Wilfrid came up to our stand, so that my friends got a good look at him. The spectators evinced great pride and satisfaction with the stalwart colonial troops in their serviceable and picturesque uniforms. At the head of the Royal Procession rode Capt. Ames, of the 2nd Life Guards, the tallest man in the British Army, of powerful build. Following were two magnificently clad bodies of aids de-camp to the Queen and the Commander-in-Chief respectively. Next in importance—and I shall only menticular interest to the reader—was the Lord-Lieutenant of London, the Duke of Westminster—who with the Duke of Cambridge, are the only subjects of Her Majesty now living, who took part in the Coronation Ceremony fifty-nine years ago. The Auxilary Forces, in attendance upon the Prince of Wales, the equerries, gentleman-in-waiting, military attaches, naval attaches with their uniforms constantly varying, created much curiosity. But perhaps the most picturesque group were the coal black, strong, bearded troops of the Imperial Service dressed in urbans and gorgeous Oriental uniforms. These men were led by Sir Pretab Singh.

dressed in turbans and gorgeous Oriental uniforms. These men were led by Sir Pretab Singh.

All along from the earliest start of the procession, the sky had been gradually clearing, and then the sun was out—Queen's weather indeed. As the Queen's party drew near, the mid summer sun was doing its best to add to the brilliancy of the grand cavilcade, in its dancing rays as reflected from glittering helmets and flashing lances and swords. The meeds of praise and admiration which were finding expression all along, were now taking the form of unstinted delight—the royal party is near. Following the dark Oriental soldiers came the carriage containing the foreign envoys. In purple robes appeared the papal Nuncio, with a face indeed looking very pope like. The envoy from the Emperor of China was also dressed in purple, carried a fan in his hand, and was looking very grave and calculating. The carriage containing officers and ladies belonging to the Queen's household was followed by those containing the young Princesses, bowing in the most lively and amusing manner. I fancy the automatic arrangements, for the assistance of the party in making their numberless acknowledgements to the spectators along the route was set to less nimble subjects than these young Princesses, for they far outdid the older ones in gracious manners. The dainty summer dresses and flower trimmed hats, with their ethereally light delicate hued parasols, gave this section of the royal party a charmingly gay and happy, summer-spirited effect. The Duchess of Teck was given special cheers, which no doubt came from a recognition of her many kindly deeds. Of all the procession the Duchess of Teck appeared to me to bow her thanks to the people with an expression from which beamed a fall sense of responsibility and a desire to please.

The Queen's near approach was heralded.

sion the Duchess of the spheaset of the to bow her thanks to the people with an expression from which beamed a full sense of responsibility and a desire to please. In the Queen's near approach was heralded to us above the hearty cheers for the Princesses. No people could have given a Queen a heartier welcome. In fact every one cheered to his utmost. As she passed her face turned toward us, and her eyes rested upon our stand. I was very pleased at this fortunate circumstance, for it gave me proof that none of her pictures flatter her. There was character and life in that look which she cast upon the people, which no picture has yet shown. From what I heard from other points, the Queen was much touched by the thunders of cheers, the tumult of shouting and the jubilant voices which received her at every turn along the route. It is said that she was moved to tears at one stage, where the preparations and decorations had been very elaborate and royal.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the Monitor:

SIR,—Some time since "An Annapolitan School Boy," whom I take to be a very big school boy indeed, undertook to question in the Annapolis Spectator, the accuracy of Mr. Calnek's statement on page 406 of what he calls "Judge Savary's History of the County of Annapolis," that the late Hon. J. W. Johnstone was ever appointed Lieut. Governor of Nova Sootia, and the editor appended in brackets an ex cathedra flat denial of the statement. As the vast majority of the people who read that paper are old enough to remember the fact thus denied, and which was so interesting to the people of this county when it occurred, I did not deem it at all worth while to notice this petty thrust, but as some writers in publications outside the county, not knowing the personnel of the Annapolis editor, nor his opportunity of knowing the facts, have been led by it to enquire for particulars, I will state that as a member of parliament at the time, I was perfectly familiar with all the facts; but the exact dates I had forgotten. After Judge Johnstone had been offered the position, and accepted it, (not declined it, as young Mr. Alcorn states,) he was on the 23rd Jan., 1873, duly appointed Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia. In London, while there on the business of purchasing some articles for Government house, he was taken suddenly quite ill, and Mrs. Johnstone was advised by a physician that there was more than a possibility that he might die on the voyage out and he was too hastily induced to tender his resignation; but he rallied, and lived for several months. In the Gazette of July 12, 1873, Hon. Mr. Archibald's appointment was announced as being "vice the Honorable J. W. Johnstone, resigned," and in the commission issued to Governor Archibald, the previous appointment of Mr. Johnstone and the date of it were recited. "Yes," sald Sir John A. MacDonald to us, "our worthy old friend was Lieut-Governor for three weeks." This by the way was about the length of Mr. Howe's actual tenure of the office. I believe

The Fall in Silver. New York, Aug. 20.—A despatch from Valparaiso says: The persistent fall in the price of bar silver has caused a paoic among the producers in Chili. Many of the principal mines of the Republic will be closed soon, and if the price continues to fall ruin will be

New York, Aug. 20.—A despatch to the the only result.

New York, Aug. 20.—A despatch to the Herald from the city of Mexico, says: "Exchange on New York has reached 145 premium. In other words, it takes $2 45 Mexican money to buy an American silver dollar containing less silver than the Mexican. This enormous depreciation of the Mexican dollar is ruining merchants. They are cancelling all orders for imports, and many will close their stores, as they cannot sell the stocks on hand at a rate high enough to replenish them. They believe that the price is unnaturally depressed, and is due to a conspiracy abroad. Meanwhile, home manufactures are booming, as the depreciation in silver makes a high tariff wall. Coffee, sugar, tobacco and sisal hemp planters are prosperous, as they sell abroad for gold and pay their laborers in silver. Strange to say, the Mexican dollar buys as much goods as ever it did, except of the imported variety. The government is hard hit, as it has to pay the interest on the foreign debt in gold.

Capitalists are flocking into the country to take advantage of the high premium and invest their gold. The belief here is that labor paid in silver will eventually win against labor paid in gold. Sankers here say a handful of men in London are manipulating the money of the world, which means that they are controlling the prices of the world.

..AND.. FEED

The undersigned now have on and two carloads of OGILVIE'S HUNGARIAN Flour and it is the highest grade made in America. No other flour will make as much bread to the barrel. It absorbs more water, therefore the bread will keep moist longer. It will make good pastry if you will only use enough water. Knead thoroughly and give it time to absorb the water. If you are not using it you should as it will save you

We are landing to-day, one car of CORNMEAL in barrels and bags. Also a large quantity of Oatmea, Tilson's Pan Dried Registered Rolled Oats, which makes a delicious porridge. We have it
