A pigeon shooting match took place at East Buffalo, N. Y., last Tuesday, between Mr. Jno. Cook, Jr., of Denver, Col., and Mr. Frank I. Dorr, of Buffalo. Each shot at 25 wild birds, single rises, 21 yards, 80 boundary, ground traps, and resulted in a victory for the latter who killed 23 birds to his opponents 19. A return match came off the day following, when Mr. Dorr again proved the better man. The same conditions were observed as at their first trial. After the 22nd shot, the score stood 16 to 11 in favor of Mr. D., and he was declared the winner. Another match was forthwith arranged and will probably take place this week.

CAMPBELL'S QUININE WINE.—Report from Dr. J. Baker Edwards, Ph. D. D.C.L. F.C.S. Professor of Chemistry and Microscopy. I hereby certify that I have carefully analysed the samples of "Quinine Wine" submitted to me by Messrs. Kenneth Campbell & Co., with the following result:

No. 1—Dark in color and turbid, deposits a muddy sediment on standing, has a sweet and acid taste, Orange Flavor and scarcely bitter, yields on evaporation a thick syrup of inverted sugar, contains only a microscopic trace of Quinine and Quindine. Is made with Orange Wine.
Sample X—Dark color, with dark muddy deposit on standing, has an acid and slightly bitter taste, contains Cinchonine but no Quinine. Is made with an acid wine, not sherry.
No. 3—Campbell's—Light color, clear, with no deposit, contains Disulphate of Quinine in the proportion of 1 grain to two fluid ounces. Is made with sound sherry wine.
N.B.—The latter (Campbell's) is the only genuine "Quinine Wine" of the three samples examined.—Signed, JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, Ph. D. D.C.L. F.C.S. Prof. of Chemistry and Microscopy, Bishops' College and College of Industry, Montreal.

Passed Through His Hands, How They Were Fed, Trau, and Driven, with an Essay on Showing Trotters and the Care of the Horses' Feet.

CHAPTER IV.

Billy Barr His Training and Shoring—His Game Race over the Mystic—Long Way and his "five miles out" over the Fashion—Mountain Maid's Race over the Fashion, Dracing Two Thousand Pounds—Training in Early Days—My Race from Providence to Boston.

(From the Spirit of The Times.)

Training was conducted very differently in the old days from the present time. They had one method, and in regard to feed and exercise no other one was then supposed to be practicable. A horse in training must be fed in the morning by five o'clock; he was then walked from seven to ten miles, then worked under blankets, fed again at three p. m.; walked again the same distance as in the morning fed again at six, then legs rubbed an hour, and his last feed given him at nine in the evening. It was thought that if over a mouthful of grass was allowed it would ruin a trotter's chances for a race. I will mention a little incident I recall. When I lived at Cambridge my father's man was giving the old trotting mare Lady Swan her walking exercise; he rode another horse, and was leading Swan, who was matched to trot a race in a few days against the gray gelding Cotton Tail. As they walked around the track by some means the Lady got away from the man and, as he had first to attend to the other horse, it was some time before he could take care of him, and come back to catch the mare; meantime she had got into a field of green corn and filled herself, and there was great anxiety among those who had backed her in the race, as they thought, owing to this circumstance, she would lose it, sure. Cotton Tail was backed heavily by his friends to win it, but no harm happened to the mare from eating the green corn, and she won easily. Lady Swan was blind, but she was one of the "Old Time" trotters, and a good one. Speaking of old times, I recall a race which I trotted from Providence to Boston (about forty miles). I matched my little mare Topsey against Mr. Dwight's chestnut mare, each to pull two men to 250-pound wagons, horse against horse, and $250 a side. We started about noon from Pawtucket turnpike, and Dwight, after going a short distance, took the lead—I followed. Going through Pawtucket he was about a quarter of a mile ahead. When we arrived at Attleboro' he was a mile and a half in advance of me. He ran his mare up all the hills; I ran mine down, and the same would fly over our heads in showers. At the halfway house, ten miles from Attleboro' and twenty-two from Providence, I overtook Dwight, who had reached there a few moments ahead. Both stopped at the hotel, and he wanted to "draw" the race, as his mare was getting tired. I had oatmeal in my wagon, of which I made some gruel, and gave my mare about two quarts. We started again. I took the lead. After going about four miles, Dwight drove his mare into a brook by the roadside. She was exhausted, and stopped. Help had to be obtained to extricate her. I kept on, but Dwight didn't appear again. I arrived in Boston in three hours and fifteen minutes from the time we started from Providence, winning the race without using my whip, and the mare was perfectly fresh. This mare weighed but 650 pounds, and could trot in 2:45. Dwight's mare died. Topsey trotted a number of races afterwards.

CHAPTER XVII.

Campaigning Outfit for a First-class Trotter—Bits, and How to Use Them—The Different Kinds of Checks—Boots and their Uses—Weight Boots.

I have been asked to give a list and description of the articles necessary to full equipment of a first-class trotter, prepared for a season's travelling, and now do so, premising by saying that, although a smaller outfit might answer, still everything enumerated comes into active and constant use during a summer campaign. First on the list, a sulky of the correct weight, the best workmanship and materials, and adapted to the horse which is to use it, as to size and other material points. Then a perfectly fitting trotting harness, made in the best manner by an experienced and honest maker. Of course, both harness and sulky have been made to order during the winter, when plenty of time could be allowed for their proper construction and after-seasoning, preparatory to use. I need not say that great taste and judgment come into play in ordering these very essential articles, and the horse and singlers for each race walking exercise in, one heavy and one light (in old times, a trainer thought a white linen suit the correct thing, but of late years we have them made of soft, light woolen fabrics, which are better and cooler. So the linen ones have been almost wholly abandoned for the use of the trotting horse.) These suits have each a hood as well as body covering, and are often also made of the best of broad-cloth, with the name of the horse worked on them in a conspicuous place. I often think there is no prettier sight to a horseman's eye than a string of trotting nags, got up with attractive suits, taking their afternoon walk, led by their "boys," occasionally stopping to nibble a few blades of grass, and then walking on again. Next on the list will be six sweat blankets, two heavy, two of medium weight, with a padded surcingle and girth for each, two moccasin halters, which will give a space one in case of necessity, two or three narrow girths to use after a sweat in "cooling out," two or three dozen good rubbing cloths; I prefer those made of what are called Ashton salt sacks (one making three rubbing cloths). The "boys" take great pride in having nice ones. A dozen true Louisiana or bath towels, these are excellent to use in getting the "water out," a few light line-soys, which are always needed when "cooling out" a horse after his work; a leading bridle; a dozen chambré skins, some of these for rubbing legs; plenty of sponges of different fineness and softness, for the mouth, legs, and feet; curry combs and brushes, a mane or water brush, a foot-lub, not too deep—if made too deep a horse might injure himself in getting in and out of it; four water pails; two lanterns, one to hang in the stall, with a cord and brass pulley to suspend it, the other to carry around; a mazzie; a foot pick, a wooden fork (steel forks are dangerous); several brooms; boots of all kinds and descriptions (not counting four ending boots to walk in, for there is no knowing when a horse may strike himself; a feed-box, every horse should have his own; a measure for grain, an oat sizer, a champagne basket for collecting manure and litter, a cushion for skewers, which the "boys" place in it to form the horse's name, this helps to decorate a stall; powder books to hang up rubbing cloths; a few brass hooks; a harness hook, with cord and pulley attached; bars or slats for hanging blankets, several large scrapers, castile, brown, and harrow soap; some small nails; harness blacking; a hammer, punches, wrenches, and lubricating oil; a clock; a rug and stable; hair comb, brush, looking-glass, and face-towels; some pictures to decorate the stall (some "boys" are more tasty than others in keeping a stall nice).

Billiards.

William Jakes, the champion billiard player of Canada, who won the prize at Montreal five weeks ago, played a match in Yattau's billiard rooms, Rochester, N. Y., last week, with Eugene B. Kimball, of that city, for $100. The game was French caroms, 300 points up, and resulted in an easy victory for the Rochester player. The following is the score:

Kimball—0 26 12 4 5 0 2 2 0 16 2 2 0 8
3 3 8 3 6 0 16 0 1 0 8 10 67 24—300.
Jakes—3 3 6 5 15 4 0 3 5 4 11 1 6 0 2 0
3 5 7 14 0 1 0 7 7 1 1 13—123.
Kimball's average, 10 5-7.
Kimball's largest run, 67.
Jakes's largest run, 15.
Referee—J. Ferguson.
Marker—Russell of Waterford.
Time of game—1 hour 30 minutes.

Foot Ball.

THE CANADA-HARVARD MATCH.

The great foot ball match was played on May 8th, at Boston, in the presence of four thousand spectators, including many ladies. Harvard won the toss. Whistling, their captain, kicked off. Canada immediately sent the ball down, and for three-quarters of an hour kept it near Harvard goal, getting seven rouses and very nearly a touch-down, but a scrimmage was formed near the touch line and the ball was passed back to Hope, who "dropped," but just failed to get a goal. Towards the end of the game the training of Harvard told, as anticipated by good judges, and they got six rouses and one goal, dropped by Seamus. The game was nevertheless very close all through, the Ontario men being in scarcely as good condition as those from Quebec. Perram (captain), played splendidly, as in fact did every man of the team. Canada's defeat is a most honorable one.
