ATHIRST

Athirst for rest, for peaceful, calm repose
Where din of earthly clamour is unknown ;
For some far spot where earth and all its woes
Shall be forgot, and Peace shall reign alone.

Though tranquil days with brightest summer skies
May come with joy and loveliness aburst,
They fade like dreams before our trusting eyes
And leave our souls all sadness, and athirst.

All sadness, that each fondly cherished hope
Like summer blossoms withered in our grasp ;
And blindly 'long life's thorny way we grope
Till Jesu's feet, with heart athirst, we clasp.

Fore'er athirst, a Mystic yearning thirst
That e'en earth's fairest streams can never slake ;
Unquenched will be, till in His love immersed
Our ransomed souls all earthly fetters break.

Athirst for " rest, sweet rest " within His Heart,
Athirst for love, unchanging and Divine ;
Athirst for heaven, and of its joys a part,—
For Thee, O Lord ! athirst for Thee and Thine !
