Case of Retroversion ('ured by Tentrofixalion.- IIospital numher 465. Office number 1247. Miss L. G., 23 years of age; occupation, genral servant; was sent to me on April 25th, 1S99, by Dr. McPhail, complaining of pain in her back and trouble with her bowels and bladder. She began to menstruate at the age of twelve, and never had any trouble with it until five years ago, sinee which her periods have been coming on every three weeks and have been rainful and scanty. For several dars before her periods come on she has severe pains down the inside of her iegs, and she wants to pass water all the time. Both when passing water and moring her bowels she teels as it something was blocking both passages. Tietroversion was suspected, and on examination it was at once found to be present, together with prolapse of both ovaries. The ute:us was easily replneed with the sound and a small pessary was introduced. She returned to me on May 10th, saying that her water was better but that she was worse in every other way. The pessary was removed and tampons were introctuced while she was placed in the knee chest position, and repeated twice a week for several weeks. Although her next period was less painful, still she found it inpossible to retain her situation, and as she had already lost several good ones from the same cause, she was anxious to have an operation, which I had told her was the surest and quickest way to be
