

manufacture of those machines, but having already lived to near the limit of human life, if I am to get any personal benefit at all for my invention in this world it must be very soon. Consequently I am open for sale of my rights in those machines, both in Canada and the United States. Letters patent have been secured from both Governments. In the meantime I will take orders from farmers for machines to be delivered next spring. Seventy-five dollars will buy the two machines, to be paid for next fall. Inasmuch as those machines do their work very quickly, two or more farmers might club together, which would make the expense very light.
