

Nor was the queen alarmed alone—
The monks sought refuge on the throne;

In abject fear they kicked and prayed,
And shook their gowns, and called for aid.
But when Columbus next unrolled
The blazing gems and lumps of gold,

In admiration soon was drown'd
All fear of objects crawling round.