GET YOUNG EYES.
One wonders to what degree or extent of misrepresentation The Telegram is willing to go to justify its support of a bad cause. The London Advertiser, The Stratford Beacon and The Hamilton Times have held a record in this respect, but several articles in yesterday's Telegram suggest the view that The Telegram seeks to rival those organs in their unhonored eminence.

One article twists a statement of Mayor Hocken's out of its context. Another declares that the Toronto Electric Light system is utterly useless to Toronto. A third attacks Ald. Wickett because The Telegram either knows nothing of the facts of the Electrical Development Company's contracts with the Toronto Street Railway and the Toronto Electric Light Company or else it deliberately mistakes the situation. Possibly the latter is the case, since the true situation is so favorable an argument for the conclusion of the purchase Mayor Hocken has in view. And it must not be forgotten that the prime and whole and sole object of all the row raised by The Telegram is to prevent Mayor Hocken getting the credit of consummating an arrangement so advantageous to the citizens as the purchase of the two companies would be.

On the basis of a theory that this purchase would restrict the Hydro Commission to the distribution of 100,000 horse power, The Telegram accuses Ald. Wickett of a desire to deprive the citizens of cheap power. Everybody but The Telegram sees clearly that the tremendous expansion of hydro-electric business, which indeed has already given the commission occasion to look around for other sources of power, implies the purchase of the Electric Development Company for the supply of Toronto's needs alone.

If The Telegram would wipe from its optics hate of Mayor Hocken and Donlands and other obnoxious obstructions, it would see these problems and their solution as younger and less prejudiced eyes, like those of Ald. Wickett, are able to see them.

TELEGRAMMATIC FIGURING.
Now we have got The Telegram to the figuring stage we shall see what a perfect dogberry it is capable of writing itself down. It would be so much wiser to stick to hollering, where it has no rivals. But there is an elementary sense at least of bookkeeping abroad in the city, and The Telegram's efforts add to the gale of the lovely April weather. Look at yesterday's effort—others will appear in The Telegram's columns from time to time, but they will not necessarily have any relation to each other. The Telegram accountants can move a few millions up or down with all the ease of a circulation manager. Perhaps the feature of the following extract is the $5,000,000 which The Telegram regards as dead loss. On the city taking over the railway the citizens will of course cease to patronize the street cars. Yet the $1,000,000 estimate for all the civic lines required in the next eight years is distinctly telegraphic. The Telegram has the effrontery to attribute this "calculation" to a city hall official:

"A fair calculation would be as follows:
Cost of building civic lines $1,000,000
Losses on civic lines for eight years 1,500,000
Bonus to be paid Toronto to Ry. for franchise rights $11,000,000
Cost of car lines and giving free rides 2,500,000
Saving by waiting $8,400,000
Percentage of receipts in next eight years 8,000,000
Total saving by city $16,400,000
"The city would save $16,400,000 by having a little patience and waiting until the franchise expires in 1921," was the conclusion of this authority.

WATER SUPPLY OF LONDON, ENGLAND.
When the proposal was mooted to call in British engineers for the purpose of obtaining their advice regarding the water system of the city objection was made that the conditions were different from any existing in the United Kingdom. While it is undoubtedly correct that many cities of the United Kingdom distribute their water supply by gravitation, in others pumping has always been necessary, and British engineers when a problem of the latter kind is presented are quite able to rise to the occasion. Take for example the new reservoir at Chingford, an extension of the water supply of London opened little more than a month ago by the King, and constructed from the designs of Mr. W. B. Bryan, chief engineer to the Metropolitan Water Board. The reservoir is only one of a chain of reservoirs showing the capability of the River Lee to yield additional water, laid before the royal commission on water supply twenty years ago by Mr. Bryan.

As given in an article that recently appeared in The Municipal Journal of London, the extreme length of this reservoir at water line is one mile 1190 yards and it has a capacity of about 3,000,000,000 gallons. With this bank the area occupied is about 500 acres, and it is filled from the north-east end with water pumped from the River Lee. The water will be stored for a considerable period, during which purification processes of great value will take place by the agency of natural forces, and after this the water will flow thru regulating towers into a tunnel and channel two miles in length to the existing distributing basin and thence to the chain of reservoirs, twelve in number. Intercepting channels will protect the water from pollution by collecting the surface water and discharging it into the river below the intakes.

What gives this reservoir special interest is the unique pumping plant, designed by Mr. H. A. Humphrey, in which the action of the internal combustion cylinder is directly applied to the raising of water. The five pumps erected at the Chingford reservoir include four units, each capable of delivering forty million gallons of water per day, and a smaller pump of one-half that capacity; the total installation delivering 180 million gallons in twenty-four hours. Each pump consists of a pipe connected by two bends at its ends, the lower with a closed combustion chamber and the higher open. The pipe is nearly full of water, forming a heavy mass or column, which is made to oscillate under the action of the explosion, and at each explosion in the larger pipes twelve tons of water can be taken out of the river and delivered into the reservoir. A system of valves allows the intake of a similar amount of water and of the explosive mixture for the next discharge. The pumps can be stopped and started instantaneously by controlling a switch on the electric ignition circuit. The whole works, buildings, roads and plant cost $2,750,000.

EMPIRE STATISTICS.
During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1912, the total value of the foreign and inter-imperial trade of the British Empire reached the colossal total of considerably over $9,000,000,000 of which $6,760,000,000 represented the trade with foreign countries. The principal units contributing to this vast volume of business were, roughly: The United Kingdom with more than $6,000,000,000; India, $1,225,000,000.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S GARDEN CITY.
In the current number of Conservation, the monthly journal published by the Dominion Commission of Conservation, attention is called to the garden suburb of Coldbrook, adjacent to the City of St. John, N. B. It has been planned on the lines of the garden cities that have proved so successful in England. The area included extends to six hundred acres and provision is being made for an independent water supply, while an efficient sewerage system and all other requirements of a modern city will be carefully constructed and regulated. All this is being done by the promoting company and during the present year houses and other erections will be constructed on the English co-operative plan. The many thoroughfares are laid out on sweeping curves and converge on the municipal centre where the municipal buildings are located. Factory sites have been provided to the south of the new city and the uplands to the east have been divided into garden plots. The city itself will have ample parks and playgrounds and its development will be as Conservation remarks, be watched with great interest by city dwellers in all parts of Canada.

TO HOTELKEEPERS AND OTHERS
On Tuesday and Wednesday next, April 29 and 30, the entire costly furnishings of the St. Charles Hotel and Cafe will be submitted to unreserved auction sale within the premises, corner of Yonge and Melinda streets. The catalogue includes all the fittings, furnishings and equipment of a first-class hotel, and the sale offers an unusual opportunity not only to hotel and restaurant-keepers, but to the public generally. It will be conducted by Chas. M. Henderson & Co., the well-known city auctioneers, and will commence each day at 11 o'clock.

CORNWALL, April 25.—(Special.)—Margaret Isabella Roch, arrested early in the week on a charge of bigamy, entered by Chief of Police Smyth, appeared for preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Danis today. After hearing several witnesses the magistrate considered the evidence submitted sufficient to warrant him in committing the woman for trial. JURY TO DECIDE CASE OF CLERK

The charge against Richardson was "conspiracy to defraud the City of Toronto by using padded time sheets."
