

PONTIFICAL MASS FOR SOLDIERS WHO GAVE THEIR LIVES

Special Service Held in St. Peter's Today.

BISHOP GIVES ADDRESS

Believes Some of Dead May Never Go to God's Presence.

A pontifical mass of requiem and absolution was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning for the soldiers who died on the battlefields of the great war. In explaining the nature of the service, the bishop, Bishop M. F. Fallon, referred to yesterday's service which was one of thanksgiving and prayer in contrast to the mass this morning which incorporated the Catholic idea of prayers for the dead.

This sacrifice has a special meaning at the close of so heartrending a conflict as the world has just known through," declared the bishop. Then addressing the men in khaki present in the church, he said: "Many of you may have seen, as I have, the constant files of graveyards in France and Flanders with their little white crosses, the symbols of Christian faith, erected above the graves of the men who have now become the children of God. How is it a sight to touch the heart and now in our turn must do our duty towards those who have fallen for us? The Catholic church says, we must pray for their immortal souls. 'This is true that many of them may have been holy enough to go immediately into God's presence, and there may be some who will never be permitted to do so, but between the one and the other there is a great middle state of purgation, of purification and the Catholic church says on her behalf that below the responsibility of prayer for them. The symbol which I see before me is not capable of understanding the moved by prayer, but through and beyond this symbol I see them, the great army of the departed dead, and I pray that we shall keep them reverently before us all the days of our lives.'"

The officers of the mass were as follows: Assistant priest, Father Roy; deacon of honor, the Rev. Canon W. T. Corcoran; Catholic chaplain of No. 1 Military District; deacon of the mass, Father Harding; subdeacon of the mass, Father Brennan. The mass was sung by the choir of St. Peter's seminary.

MORE EVIDENCE IN EXPLOSION PROBE

Owner of Building Never Saw Any Smoking There.

The probe into the cause of the explosion on Tuesday afternoon at the factory of J. C. McKillop, which commenced Tuesday morning in the presence of the coroner, J. C. McKillop, was continued this morning. J. C. McKillop, owner of the building that was blown to atoms by the explosion, was the first witness called at 10 o'clock. Mr. McKillop stated that, according to his agreement with J. C. McKillop, the latter was to be out of the garage in question on the first day of July last. McKillop was not in the building on Tuesday afternoon, but he was in the building on Wednesday morning, when he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion.

The witness gave evidence that an explosion had taken place in the big, two-story building, the contents of which he supposed were iron tanks. He had been in the place half an hour, but had never seen anything. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion.

"How much carbide was there round the premises," Mr. McKillop asked J. C. McKillop. Mr. McKillop said that he had no idea. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion.

"About 2,000 pounds," was the reply. Mr. McKillop, in answer to another question, could not say how much the explosion was felt. He had no idea. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion. He said that he never saw any smoking in the building, but he saw the explosion.

HAS NO FEAR OF ANY BOLSHEVIST MENACE

Mayor Does Not Believe It Will Influence Canada.

Canada has nothing to fear from Bolshevism, according to Mayor C. R. Somerville. While there is some reason for thinking that the movement has gained some ground in this country, he said, it will not reach any dangerous size. It would be well, however, he says, for the country to take special care to lock the door of immigration to any persons who might be reasonably suspected of being connected with the Bolshevist movement abroad. The only danger would be in the indiscriminate reception of immigrants from European countries after the peace terms are settled.

SEATTLE UNION VOTES IN FAVOR OF STRIKE TO RELEASE MOONEY

Attempt Will Be Made to Turn Demonstration Into International Affair.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 20.—At a projected session lasting until after midnight, the Seattle Metal Trades Council, representing approximately 35,000 workers, early today voted to strike to bring about the release of Thomas J. Mooney and his co-defendants, convicted in San Francisco in connection with the "preparation day bombing case."

An attempt will be made to turn the demonstration into an international affair, union men said. The resolution passed by the council asks that Arthur Henderson, leader of the British labor party, be requested by cable to ask the British labor organizations to take similar measures to secure Mooney's release.
