Central League Formed.

At a meeting held in the C. P. R. office, King street, last evening, the Central Baseball League was formed, consisting of the following teams: C. P. R. Dominion Express Co., Bank of B. N. A., and the I. C. R. The league games will be played on the Shamrock grounds, commencing on June 8 and ending about Sept. 2. The teams were represented as follows: C. P. R., D. L. McLaren, manager; D. Henchery; Dominion Express, W. Bartlett, manager; R. Woods; Bank of B. N. A., W. Caldwell, manager; R. A. Colter; and the I. C. R., by James McMaqu, manager.

"Dutch" Leonard Suspended.
St. Louis, Mo., May 25—Hugh Leonard, star pitcher for the Boston Americans, was suspended yesterday on the arrival of the team here for not being in good condition.

McCredie Refused Offer.
San Francisco, May 25—Walter McCredie, manager of the Portland Pacific Coast League team, announced today that he had refused the managership of the Cleveland American League team.

Coombs Has New Delivery.
If Jack Coombs can continue at the present clip, he is the marvel of baseball for all time, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Never in the history of athletics of any description has a man been able to take his old place at the top of the heap after being bed-ridden for two years.

Some of the greatest medical experts in this city—and there are many—hold Manager Mack and Coombs that there was one chance in a million of his ever being able to come back. The only one who held out the slightest hope for Coombs when he was at last able to get about was Dr. J. B. Carnett, who was a famous football player at Penn in the nineties. He told Jack how to get back his strength and predicted that he would come back.

The most remarkable part of Coombs' comeback is that he has so completely changed his style of pitching. Always noted for his terrific speed, Coombs is now almost exclusively a curve ball pitcher. This is the hardest delivery on the arm, and it is a question whether his arm can stand the strain. He has pitched three games and all of them have been won solely through his own brilliancy and not through the ordinary work at bat and in the field by his teammates. Besides the three full games, Coombs held the Braves hitless for five innings in a game at Boston on Bunker Hill Day in the morning, when he relieved a comrade.

FAMOUS COXSWAIN KILLED.
Included in the recent lists of the killed at Ypres is the name of Second Lieutenant Stanley MacLagan, known to rowing enthusiasts as the greatest coxswain of recent years. He steered the Oxford crew for four years, 1889 to 1902, and later steered winning Leander crews, including the famous eight which won the Olympic regatta at Henley in 1908. At the time of his death he held the post of secretary of the Amateur Rowing Association. He was a member of the London Stock Exchange, and was thirty-five years old. He was killed in action on April 25.

When Walsh Was Lucky.
"There are times," said Jess Willard, champion lightweight, "when we kick because we don't get everything we want, and yet we never know when we are playing lucky."
Walsh heard that Elbert Hubbard, his friend, was to sail on the Lusitania. He resolved to go with him, as he wanted to see his sister, and, besides, figured the trip would do him good.
"I sent a telegram to East Aurora," says Walsh, "asking Mr. Hubbard if he had booked passage on the Lusitania. I did not get an answer until the next day, too late to arrange to catch the boat. I have since learned that my telegram reached East Aurora about one hour after Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard started for New York to catch the boat."
"The day the boat sailed I heard from Mr. Hubbard, but it was too late then for me to get away. I was kidding myself for not having known earlier that my friend was going to Europe. If I had known a day sooner I would have been on that boat as sure as my name is Welsh. The delayed telegram probably saved my life."
Jess Willard's New Act.
Jess Willard has started on a new job—one that will fill him and his company with great joy after each performance. Jess only has to walk up to the box office and draw down $1,000.
In Minneapolis he begins work with the "101 Ranch." Jess has to do a little work. When the band starts, he joins the parade, then mounts a fiery mustang and does circus stunts. With a rifle (loaded with buckshot) he will dash round and round the arena and break glass balls tossed into the air. He then will grasp the lariat and rope steers. When this is over he will do the splits and go a few rounds.
Parsons Defeated Pincus.
North Sydney, May 25—More than 500 spectators witnessed a fifteen-round bout between Billy Parsons and Jack Pincus here. The bout was a good one and pleased the big crowd immensely. Parsons put his opponent away in the eighth round and is therefore the undisputed lightweight champion of the maritime provinces. Pincus' next opponent will probably be Jim Foley, a New Glasgow boxer.
Note:—Saul Gallet of this city claims the lightweight championship, so it looks as if he and Parsons may have to settle it between themselves.
News of the Boxers.
Paul Mettendorf, a light heavyweight boxer of France, was killed in action near Les Eparges the other day.

George Carpenter, French champion, who is now an aviator, declares that even when the war is over he will continue to keep in touch with aviation. He intends, however, to try for a crack at the championship when peace is restored.
It is an unusual coincidence that two champions should defend their titles successfully in the same city, on the same night and in the same month of the year. This happened in London the other night and the result of the battles will probably make the scrappers more superstitious of the 18th round, for both champions put over the knockout punch in that session. Pat O'Keefe, middleweight champion of England, retained his title against Bandman Black, Sergeant of France.

Bashan, welterweight champion, defeated Tom McCormack.
WRESTLING
Dr. Roller Defeated Christiansen
New York, May 25—Dr. Roller, champion of America, is one step nearer the wrestling championship of the world, for he defeated Lorenz Christiansen of Denmark last night at the international tournament in Manhattan opera house. Roller threw his opponent in seven minutes, with a wrist and body lock.
Match Postponed
Owing to Jim Prokes being summoned to his home in Lowell, Mass., by the illness of his wife, his bout with Strangle Lewis has been postponed.

To remove grease stains from wall-paper mix pipeclay with water to the consistency of cream, spread over the marks, allow to remain for two days, then remove with a stiff brush, and the stains will have disappeared.
When lemons are hard cover them with boiling water and stand them aside to cook. They will then appear fresh and full of juice. Neither will the juice seem in the least diluted by any water absorbed.

EDWARD ABILES, who plays the leading role in this successful and very unique comedy is fast acquiring renown as the foremost legitimate comedy artist on the moving picture screen. His vast experience as a legitimate comedy star in foremost Broadway hits has given him just that degree of refinement and lightness of touch which distinguishes him from all of the old-time screen farcesters and makes him a delight to people who appreciate humor rather than buffoonery. Under the direction of Mr. Lasky, Mr. Abiles has already achieved sterling successes in "Brewster's Millions" and "The Making of Bobby Burnit." It is no exaggeration to state that he has far wider laugh-provoking opportunities in "AFTER FIVE" and that he has become wonderfully adept at giving the full screen value to every situation.
