Fables On Health

DECEIT

THERE was a nerve specialist in Anytown who was fond of telling a story about a woman who came to him for consultation. When she had been a child, the psychiatrist learned, she developed the habit of "getting sick" when ever there was anything hard to be tackled at school.

On the occasion of a particular arithmetic quiz the child realized that she had been negligent in her studies and was likely to not pass. So she made an excuse to her mother. Three months before this child had been quite ill. Memory of this illness and its escapes from duties occurred to her and she pretended to be again troubled.

It worked. She escaped. Now at this period of her life the "attack" was intentional and pre-meditated. But continuous use of the same device to get out of perplexing problems resulted in the "sickness" being registered by the "unconscious mind." In later years the sickness would bob up handily whenever any difficulty was encountered. By this time the woman did not realize the whole thing was not sickness at all, but a form of defense built up through the years and now seeming to be a reality.

Such cases are numerous and should cause parents to watch carefully the actions of their children lest they develop conditions similar to that here described.

THE TRAVELER CLOCK'S STORY.

"While we are cleaning you out and fixing you up, can't you tell us the story of your travels?" asked Tick Tock, the clock fairy.

"Well," said the bright little clock who was all brass and glass when he didn't have his leather jacket on, "since you are so kind and accommodating, I will tell you as much as I can remember. What would you like to hear about first?"

"About the sea," said Nick.

"As to that," said the little clock, "a ship's clock could tell you more. When I am on the sea, I am usually shut up tight in my leather case and down inside of a trunk that is down in the dark hold of the ship. That's a sort of cellar. All I can tell you about the sea is that sometimes I nearly turn inside out when it gets rough, and I am always thankful when we land in some country or other and I am taken out of 'em."

"Then tell us about some of the places you have been," said Nancy.

"All right," said the clock. "I'll tell you about Egypt. Once my master took me to Egypt. I didn't know where I was until he took me out of my leather case and set me on a table beside a big wide window.

"It gave me quite a start to see camels outside and people riding them. Also little donkeys with donkey-boys running behind and twisting their tails to make them go. Poor things! I nearly fell off the table I was so mad, and my master caught me just in time."

"What else did you see," asked Nick.

"Well, there was a great wide river. I learned that it was called the Nile. And across the river were great pointed things that looked like tents. I thought with all the camels and donkeys and tents and queer people walking around in queer clothes, that we must have struck a circus. But circus nothing! It was the city of Cairo we were in, and the tent things I found out afterwards were called Pyramids. They were built of solid stone and thousands of years old. Some old kings built them. It

AN INFANT PRODIGY.

Two hundred years ago, on June 27, 1725, died, if contemporary records are to be believed, a four-year-old child who surely holds the record for infant precocity, says "The London Post."

A few hours after Christian Heinecker (he was a little German) came into the world he spoke, and in ten months could converse on most subjects. By the time he was thirteen months old the Bible was an open book to him. At the end of two and a half years he could answer any question dealing with history and geography, and then turned his attention to languages. He learned to speak Latin and French fluently, but his feeble constitution broke down under the strain, and little Christian's "crowded hour" was at an end.

Fashion Fancies

GAIETY of coloring is the keynote of the simple straight kimono sketched above. The satin used for this model has an amber background and is printed in red and blue and brown. The blue is the brilliant royal blue which is so smart for fall, and the kimono is banded in plain satin of this color.

Crepes used for smart washable kimono are more gay than ever. Some of these models achieve a flare silhouette by means of inset godets, the same treatment used in fall frocks.

Lie! The Lucky.

Lie! was a man's name. Over the huge, bold shoulder of the world he came. Into a land as lonesome as a star. That God had set aside For mortals not to mar— Too huge for men— Not till Lie's sons set foot upon the moon Will such a deed as his be done again. —Henry Allen.

The Vision.

I am a child of the morning star That shines in the dawn lit sky afar, A light of brightness—a jewel to adorn The pearls of the opening morn, And blushing just like a bride of the day I wander forth in the woodland way, And the rising sun comes up to survey The wonderful things of the waking day. The east is flaming with rose and gold The world of Heaven, Christ's kingdom of old. And my soul seems to soar as it did of yore. When I was a child and knew fairy lore. —J. Brough.

MAUSOLEUM IS SOLD FOR DEBTS

Elaborate Bradley $200,000 Crypt in Woodlawn Cemetery Disposed Of.

Body Removed to Less Pretentious Place—Began Life as Brick Wagon Driver.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The sale of the Bradley Mausoleum, one of the finest monuments of Woodlawn Cemetery, to settle the debts of the William Bradley estate, has become known.

Reports of the sale, which is said to have been completed last January, was confirmed at the office of Max Stein, attorney for Mrs. William Bradley, widow of the contractor and subway builder.

At the office of Joseph Paterno, a real estate operator, who was mentioned as the purchaser, it was said that there was no information to be given out. Mr. Stein declined to reveal the sale price, but from an unofficial source it was reported that it was about $100,000.

BODY RECOVERED.

The body of Mr. Bradley, which was placed in the mausoleum, as well as the bodies of other members of his family which were in the famous crypt, were removed after the sale, it was said. They have been placed in less pretentious burying plots in the cemetery, it is understood.

The mausoleum is constructed of Italian marble. It rises on the crest of a knoll surrounded by more than 1,000 acres of lawn. When it was built in 1911 its cost was said to be in excess of $200,000.

The building of the mausoleum was an outstanding feature in the career of Mr. Bradley. He started life as the driver of a brick wagon and was pointed out as a successful self-made man. At the opening of the World War, he was reported to be a millionaire. With the coming of the war, however, there was a consequent decline in construction work and, in the upheaval in the financial world, he was reported to have been a heavy loser.

$2,300 GIVEN TO STRICKEN FATHER

Husband of Woman Shot in Police Duel With Thugs Handed Purse.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Charles F. Connelly, who is bringing up his four children single-handed since his wife, Maria, was shot and killed in a pistol battle between bandits and detectives, was summoned to Police Headquarters to meet several police officials. Then the commissioner rose, and in the name of the department handed Connelly a check for $2,310.30.

Commissioner Enright explained that policemen in the workhouse laundry had contributed $7.50 to the fund for the motherless family. A dozen other interested persons had sent in a total of $83. The other $2,229.80 had come from members of the force in 20-cent contributions.

Some weeks ago automobile thieves encountered detective and shot and killed Detective Richard Henneberry of the track squad. A stray bullet struck Mrs. Connelly.

Read Alberta Woman's Experience With Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. After taking three bottles I became much better and now I have a bonny baby girl four months old. I do my housework and help a little with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter." —Mrs. A. A. Adams, Box 54, Provost, Alberta.
