Owned by an Eccentric Lady in Essex ANOTHER VISITOR

Provincial Constable Hoskins tells an nteresting story of a strange house pet owned by an eccentric lady on the borders of Essex and Hartfordshire. The pet is nothing less than an immense pig, weighing ninety stone, considerably more han half a ton, and it is an object of uriosity for miles around. The owner s Miss Hampton, a lady about forty years of age, who resides with her mother in a little thatched cottage. The pig was the runt of a litter and brought up with all the care and attention that would be lavished on a child. It fed with the family and ate and drank out of saucer at the table.

When the constable reached this stage of his story the Times representative to whom he told it expressed incredulity, In its infancy the animal was fed on toast and tea. It sleeps in a darkened
