WINTER PORT TRADE. The winter port business is over for ne season of 1900-1901. In past years a reviewing the traffic for the season, umber of steamers loading here this eason, compared with last:—

than last year, 4t must be remembered that the 8 Furness steamers last year were direct boats, taking all their argo here. This year the 11 boats of that line took only part of their cargo at St. John. This would make a diffor the season. If we say only three and credit the Furness line with as

Let us hope that next year Mr. Blair will tion which he some years ago boasted his government rallway would do, and that the influence of Mr. Tarte will be strong enough to ensure an arrange ment whereby contracts may be made in good time and goods come forward in larger quantities over the C. BUSINESS IN THE SCHOOLS.

The necessity of bringing the univer ity into closer touch with the comcial spirit of the age is being more videly recognized. In Toronto it roposed to introduce in the university which bears the name of the city a ourse of special study suitable. oung men who desire to engage in mmercial pursuits. The university faculty deliberated upon the question and appear to have agreed upon a two years' course, at the close of of the faculty appeared last week be-fore a committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' association and outmittee favored the general idea, but felt that the scheme did not go far enough. They thought a longer term sibly four years, would be better and that diplomas instead of certifi-cates should then be granted. To extend the term would of course involve additional expense, and that was matter the faculty had to carefully consider. They will, however, go over the ground again, and then have a second conference with the business men to see what can be done to further the project. There is a very evident tend-ency toward throwing upon the public ns of learning much that must now be acquired by attendance at busi-ness colleges which are private insti-tutions, it appears to be a tendency in the right direction, and even in the common schools we shall probably see more training of a business nature introduced, along with more of technic-al instruction. The age demands at more and more. As the spirit of comnercial and industrial rivalry becomes more active, the need of special training along these lines becomes mor mperative.

NEGLECTED CEMETERIES. The man who whetted his axe on s The man who whetted his axe on a gravestone in the Old Burial ground was not more contemptuous of those finer feelings which prompt us to reverence the resting place of the dead than are many others. Were it otherwise the spot where so many of the Loyalists were laid away would be so beautiful a spot that the vandal would suffer no temptation to mar its loveliness. But there are other graveyards about the city which show neglect. Nor is this confined to one place or country. A Worcester, Mass., paper seeks to awaken some interest in the condition of an unused cemetery in that city. It says:—

condition of an unused cemetery in that city. It says:—

The old cemetery just beyond Newton square and Pleasant street grows more unsightly every year. The approach of spring causes us to inquire whether those responsible for the care of this property cannot be brought to do their duty. The cemetery is in such a situation that it should be either kept in a proper manner or the bodies.

TOURISTS AND THE CUSTOMS. The customs department at Ottaw deposit shall be paid on the bicycle to be returned on the tourist's departure. The customs officers must make a return of these deposits to the head office the same day. This resulted in great inconvenience to a tourist who only wanted to remain one day, as the next day. The rule, however, has now the case of a one-day visit, need no be made at the head office. And the or three days for his money or else g

THAT DIVORCE MILL.

A list of the divorces granted at the Ellsworth, Maine, is something to be No less than fourteen have been granted-five for cruel and abusive treat ment, eight for utter desertion and one for habits of intoxication. In a recent issue the Star referred to the published list of twenty-seven divorces granted last week in Portland, Me., and it will be of interest to summarise the lists of the several Maine towns as they are published. The infelicity of the married state seems very great in that state and tends to make New Brunswick youths hesitate ere they cross the border with matrimonial intent.

ACCIDENT AT THE DEPOT. This morning John Petrie, an olier in the employ of the L. C. R., was severely hurt while coupling cars. The train for Hailfax was being made up in the shed. Mr. Petrie, while coupling the coaches, was struck on the chest by the projecting piece of fron at the end of the cars into which the coupling pin goes. His collar bone was broken and he was badly shaken up. The ambulance was summoned and he was taken to the hospital, where this afternoon he was resting easily. Mr. Petrie is about thirty-five years of age and lives on St. Paul street.

ST. LAWRENCE NAVIGATION.

OTTAWA, April 29.—Hon. Mr. Tarte announced this morning that the grounding of the steamer Tiverton in the St. Lawrence was due to the vessel being a mile out of her course. The channel at the point where she struck was 759 feet wide, with 38 feet depth. The captain claims that the lights were closed and this caused the disaster.

INTERVIEW WITH F. H. CLERGUE.

F. H. Clergue, in an interview published in the Montreal Star, says:

"I hope that the discussion which has arisen in parliament over the contract between my company and the government railways for their rail supply will not be terminated until the government have informed parliament of all facts relating to the negotiations which culminated in this contract. Up to the present stage of the discussion I do not think that either parliament or the press have a just idea of the question." Clergue states that a proposition was made to Blair a year before the general election, and on the promise of the government to take 25,000 tons of rails each year for five years, construction of the plant was commenced in good faith. Without the guarantee of this order from the government Clergue states that his company would have never commenced the work of constructing the mills. Only the absence of Mr. Blair prevented the decision of the government being put into formal shape. On his return the order in council was passed and the contract sent to Clergue, upon terms which were entirely satisfactory to the recipient.

in Dorchester penitentiary by a regimental court martial.

Colonel Wadmore was mildly admonished, on the assumption that he hast not knowingly shown contempt to the court or disrespect of the King's writ, his action having been committed on the spur of the moment and in the heat of temper.

Counsel then argued the habeas corpus case for two hours. The court refused the application, two of the judgest asying that they agreed reluctantly with the majority on the bench. Sergeant McPhee accordingly will leave for Dorchester penitentiary on Monday to serve six months.
