Mr. Charles L. Cyr Asks That

the Proceedings of the Waterways Commission.

IRRELEVANT MATTERS ADDUCED SO FAR
The Editor of The Standard.
Sir:—I read with considerable interest a letter published a short time ago in the Telegraph concerning the work done by the Waterways Commission. The writer did not go far enough, but perhaps he did not wish to take up too much space. I would call attention to these important facts bearing on the subject.
In the speeches in the Dominion Parliament having reference to the work of the Commission only one question was brought into prominence and that was the restoration of the waters of the Alleghash basin to their natural channel. The question of the handling of logs in the Province of New Brunswick was not once mentioned. Note the counsel shown by our Commissioners to the other members. When the counsel for the U. S. Commissioners wished to carry investigations into the province, the Canadian commissioners placed no impediment in the way. They making it appear as if the act of the entire Commission held numerous sessions in St. John and in Fredericton, putting on record the statistics of the lumber industry in these places had reference solely to that and to the handling of logs on the river in New Brunswick. To my way of thinking, this action of the Commission was a palpable absurdity.
What bearing could it possibly have on any point for which the Commission was convened? Three-fourths of all the evidence brought before the Commission so far has been of that irrelevant nature and I concede that our Commissioners permitted it out of courtesy to the U. S. members and their counsel.

Soon Objected.
But note what happened just as soon as our Commissioners expressed their purpose of carrying their investigations into the State of Maine, to reach the cause of the trouble. The counsel for the U. S. Commission objected. They could not go into Maine. The powers of the Commission, he objected, extended only to that part of the river which forms the boundary. As a Frenchman might express it in his own language, "It is to laugh." The Commission could waste its valuable time through many sessions on irrelevant matters, but the Province of New Brunswick, to please the U. S. Commissioners, but just as soon as the Canadian Commissioners express their desire to investigate something vital and to carry their inquiry into Maine, the U. S. counsel says, "Hands off. You can't do it. You have no authority. You can't go beyond where the river forms the boundary."

Now, in all the speeches in the Dominion Parliament the one thing spoken of was the diversion of the head waters. Never a hint of how logs are handled in New Brunswick. The only thing was, and still is, the restoration of our waters. There was never any other question to be considered, not even in the State of Maine today the only parties opposed to doing justice to Canada are those who are personally benefited by the diversion—who coin it into dollars and cents.
My constituents time and again have come to me to ask why the master of the Alleghash waters was not spoken of at any session of the Waterways Commission. I could not explain. To me, as to them, it was altogether inexplicable. It isn't as if it was a small affair. The drainage basin whose waters would give the St. John a steady summer flow, has hundreds of square miles of lake surface and 1500 square miles of forest land, the best and, I may say, the only natural regulator for river supply. It holds the rains while they fall and gives the water out steadily. It is nature's safeguard against floods and droughts.
In this immense area you could place the whole state and still have some margin. Our lumber operators could pass their logs along steadily. Nothing would be held up for want of water and harmony would prevail. There would be nothing to arbitrate. We don't ask for it, but the water is ours and we need it.

Crippled and Curtailed.
Another thing. The Grand Falls Power Company has started to build up at Grand Falls a power like that at Niagara Falls. That means the general development of the St. John valley, and incidentally it will benefit the entire province. It will reduce the incentive to emigration. It will provide work and wages for our young people right at home. It is heartbreaking to a true Canadian to travel in the United States and find that the Canadian Provinces furnish a large part of the bone and muscle, and the brain too, that is developing and building up a foreign country. Canada needs them. Canada has the land and the potential resources to provide abundantly for all its sons and daughters. But this particular resource is crippled and curtailed for lack of that water. In summer when the water falls low and logs are hung up, this water-power, under present conditions, cannot take the water for power without using the falls. But the water which belongs to our river would give all that could be used for that purpose and still leave the falls a thing of beauty and a joy forever.
Of course, if we are quiet and say nothing we will have peace; but along with peace we want prosperity and we want justice. We might continue to let this great resource be used to build up a neighboring friendly state, but would it be manly or right to con-sue to do that while the upbuilding of our own country needs it? He that falls to provide for his own, we are told, is worse than an infidel, and I imagine, that must be pretty bad. At any rate, we don't want to be worse than an infidel.

WHEN ENGLAND
IS BUILDING
INVINCIBLES
Functions of Great Armored Cruisers That Are Now Being Constructed by Great Britain—Cavalry of the Sea.

RUSSELL REPLIES TO ADMIRALTY CRITICS
Washington, Nov. 17.—Reports from abroad indicate that England has not accepted the creation of great armored cruisers, such as the invincibles, without wondering what role they are designed to play in the event of war.
Here are great vessels, well armed, excessively fast, costing as much as Dreadnoughts but unable to go into first battle line because of light armor, and the thinking Englishman naturally asks himself why it would not be advisable to build Dreadnoughts. His question is answered by Herbert Russell in the London Daily Mail who says, in part:
Determining Factor.
Mobility, when accompanied by great "smashing" power, is likely to prove a most important determining factor in the course of a sea struggle.
The capital cruisers are to an army, the capital cruisers might prove to a fleet —doubling round the flank of an enemy, or bolting off to the scene of a distant engagement, and then arriving in time to make the knockout blow.
The speed of the Dreadnought continues to be good enough for the super-Dreadnoughts; the speed of the Indomitable is not good enough for the Indefatigable, and this is what gives rise to the vagueness as to tactical purposes.
At the same time, let us not suppose that the Admiralty Board of Construction is troubled with any such vagueness, although they have never seen it to take the nation into their confidence on this point. The Indomitable design, in their view, embodies a perfectly clear conception of functions which go beyond those of any battleship.

It may truthfully be said that the capital cruiser can cover every duty which falls to the lot of the navy. But then, as economy of force is essentially to endurance throughout a campaign, it is manifest that there are many functions upon which it would be but poorly fitted. It is a vessel of the hammer and anvil principle to employ these units. In the navy itself, where the same duality exists as to the tactical measures of this latest type of warship, one distinct warship is assigned to her by general consent. And this is responsibility for maintaining the national ladder. In short, the capital cruiser is designed to negative the offensive and defensive purposes, while our fleet is giving battle victoriously we might be starved into capitulation.

A Cunarders.
It is something more than a mere coincidence that almost contemporaneously with the advent of the two giant Cunarders, built largely by Admiralty subvention and to Admiralty specification, we had the dramatic surprise of the revelation that the three Indomita-bles former is 33,000 tons apiece. Take it at the pinch of national urgency when passenger accommodation would have to be utilized as freight space, these vessels would carry a load of carrying 25,000 tons dead weight apiece.
Within a fortnight they could be rushed across the Atlantic, loaded, temporarily armed, and return to our shores. This means that every week one or two of these vast steamers would be pouring 25,000 tons of grain into the national granaries. Especially in the winter months, when the Mauretania or Lusitania could make her passage in comparative immunity. No battle fleet could hold up a little flying fleet of ocean liners, because they are invincible in a runaway match. No cruiser squadron, composed of excellent foreign types, would attempt to bar the progress of such a formidable force.

The members of our Dominion Parliament have spoken in no uncertain language on this subject. Space will not permit long quotations from speeches the reports of which are before me. Hon. Plunket in the House showed up the history of this spoilition and how it violated the constitution of the United States which is expressly declared to be the supreme law of the land on such matters, binding on every state notwithstanding any legislation it may pass.

To Restore Water.
Hon. Mr. Pugsley made a stirring speech on the same subject, which showed that correspondence had been carried on relative to this question; that in the treaty which had been prepared this matter would be presented in a clear and unmistakable light.
It expressly provides that "no other country shall have the right to divert any waters flowing into boundary waters and boundary rivers which would in any way materially lower the level of the water or interfere with navigation." He showed that the logical consequence would be that the U. S.
Government would take steps to restore the water to the St. John.

Hon. Mr. Connors showed from United States decisions in other cases exactly similar that water could not be taken even when that water was used for irrigation. Just think of that.
But there was only one side to it and only one question to be considered, and that was the restoration of the waters of the Alleghash basin to the U. S. Consul were not even thought of.
Don't let us be misled. There is just one point claiming any attention.
Avoid side issues. Restore the waters. That will abolish all dispute between the upper and lower St. John.
That will give power at Grand Falls to develop the province. That will give peace and prosperity.—St. Leonard, Nov. 15, 1909. Charles L. Cyr.

POSING AS A PREACHER TO
SHOE CURE
J. A. Gee, 71 Years Old, a Mountaineer and Known as a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in Real Life, is Captured.

CAUGHT COINING GOLD PIECES
Sandpoint, Idaho, Nov. 17.—Posing as a Christian minister and on this pretence uniting young lives in marriage and performing the last sad rites over those passed into the great beyond, intrenched in the confidence of his neighbors so far that they backed him to a great extent in carrying on mining operations, and all the while the leader of one of the most clever counterfeiting gangs apprehended in the history of the northwest, J. A. Gee, an aged seventy-one year, has been arrested while at work coining spurious money in his laboratory in the mountains, about five miles from Trout Creek, Mont., and the career of a living Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde brought to an end.

Son's Arrest a Clue.
The arrest of Lee was brought about through the arrest of a man at Sandpoint Wednesday evening, September 15, who had attempted to pass a spurious ten dollar gold coin at Ponderay, Idaho, miles east of Sandpoint, and who refused to divulge his name or anything of his antecedents. Since his arrest the officials have found he is Henry Lee, the eldest son of J. S. Lee.

Henry entered a saloon at Ponderay and offered to buy a drink for a woman, giving her a ten dollar gold piece. The bartender, of Bonner county, and he woman threw it on the floor, telling Lee his money was no good.
"Why, I know where I got that money," said Lee, naming a saloon in that vicinity, "I will go and see about this." The woman watched Lee, and instead of going to the place where he claimed to have received the "phony" money, he started for Sandpoint.
The woman telephoned to the Sandpoint police and Officer Ernest Kitchen was sent to arrest him. On his way he met Deputy Sheriff William Hutchinson, of Bonner county, who was looking for an escaped trusty from the county jail, and the deputy accompanied him.

The second man the officers hailed Officer Kitchen recognized when he turned on his flashlight. The man was told to halt. At the word he turned and started to run, drawing a revolver.
Kitchen caught up with him and they fought.

Quiets Him With a Blow.
In the darkness Hutchinson was unable to distinguish one man from the other until he had hit a man with his head, he struck the prisoner with the head of his revolver. Handcuffed, the man was then brought to the county jail, where $205 worth of spurious five dollar and ten dollar gold pieces was found upon his person.

In his struggle the man had thrown many of the gold pieces on the ground.
Not a clue as to the identity of the prisoner was left, with the exception of a letterhead with the top cut off and only the words "Trout Creek, Mont." left.

The only words that the prisoner spoke in regard to the affair were heard by Chief of Police Traue, who in citizen's clothes interviewed him, and when asked why he submitted to him, he said, "My d—n gun wouldn't go off."

Tissue Plays the Sleuth.
Sheriff Merritt has photographs of the prisoner made and sent them to the Sheriff of Bonner county, Mont., and Trout Creek, Mont., with the query "Do you know this man?" Deputy Sheriff Tissue, of Sanders county, and also special agent for the Northern Pacific Railway at Trout Creek, came to Sandpoint to see the prisoner, but did not recognize him.
Tissue's detective work led to the apprehension of the counterfeiting gang.

Business cards were printed by Tissue with the inscription "H. J. Stone, Attorney at Law, Paulsen Building, Spokane, Wash." and the officer called on the prisoner, where he posed as a lawyer. Tissue won the man's confidence so far as to be told that he had a wife and family at Clarks Fork, Idaho, and that his "old man" was the manufacturer of bogus money.
Going to Clarks Fork, Tissue found the prisoner's wife and through her learned the location of the plant and that the "old man" was J. S. Lee, Sr., president of the Burnt Forest Copper and Silver Mining Company.
Warning Mrs. Lee to say nothing to any one and promising that he would go and help the "old man" bury the plant and coin he had on hand, Tissue made plans with the Sheriff of Bonner county, Idaho, and of Sanders county, Montana, to meet him at Thompson Falls Monday night and plan the raid.
Arriving at Trout Creek Tuesday morning, the arresting officers, Sheriff Merritt and Deputy Sheriff Hutchinson of Bonner county, and Sheriff Baker and Deputy Sheriffs Roddy and Tissue of Sanders county, went to the home of the Lees, arrested Mrs.
Lee, Sr. and John Lee, a crippled son, and searched the premises, finding a genuine $10 gold piece which had been used in the counterfeiting business, the dates on this coin and spurious ones found at the plant being identical.

Two loaded revolvers were found in handy places, with plenty of ammunition near by. Leaving Baker and Roddy with the two prisoners, the rest of the party informed Mrs. Lee that they were going to the mine to arrest her husband, whereupon she warned them to be careful, as her husband was heavily armed and might shoot one of them.
The party made their approach up the wild canyon to where the Burnt Forest mine is located, five miles from Trout Creek, without being seen by the elder Lee, and rapped on his cabin door before he was aware of their approach.
Members of the posse could hear Lee moving about inside, and after locking the door to his laboratory they were.

inside he asked: "Who's there?" Tissue replied: "A friend; I'm cold.
Open the door and let me in."
At this Lee opened the door, a revolver in his hand, but was taken completely off his guard at the unexpected appearance of the three men, who had him covered, and when Sheriff Treffitt said, "I guess we will have to search you, old man," he smiled and said, "Oh, I guess I know what you handful of the bogus money from his pocket and turning these and his gun over to the Sheriff.

Lee was placed in the back in charge of Hutchinson, and the other two of-broken pieces of plaster of paris and a distiller's worm. The latter, Lee said, he used in distilling the water, as it was highly mineralized.

Remnants of plaster moulds were found under a rock in a dry creek bed in the house and in a stove in the cabin.
While searching in the cellar Sheriff Merritt found a quantity of imperfectly and partially finished pieces of bogus money hidden under a pile of staves. Other money was found which was ready for the gold wash.

Henry Lee moved to Clarksfork with his wife and children in April, telling the people of Clarksfork that he came there on account of the school for his children.

The officers believe the Lees were planning to enlarge their counterfeiting business at the time of their arrest, as they have lately learned that a large order for crucibles and other assaying apparatus had been ordered from a Missoula firm, the order being signed by J. S. Lee, Sr., as president of the mining company. The order was not filled.

J. E. Lee, Sr., his wife and sons, Joe and Henry, together with the paraphernalia of the counterfeiting plant, have been turned over to United States Deputy Marshal J. W. Heigler, of Helena, Lee, Sr., wife and Joe, will be held for the session of the Grand Jury at Helena, while Henry will be tried in the United States Federal Court at Moscow, Idaho, where he has been taken.

Two Fires.
Winnipeg, Nov. 17.—Two early morning fires at Regina resulted in the destruction of the house of Samuel Shannon, himself being somewhat burned in effecting the rescue of some of his younger children, and the gut-ting of the Corless place, on the eastern annex, the family in this case escaping with nothing but the clothing they wore.

GLASGOW STUDENTS IN
"ANOTHER ENCOUNTER" Hypnotist Dodges Them—They Smash Windows and Battle With Police, Who Are Finally Victorious.
London, Nov. 17.—Despatches from Glasgow say that the medical students rioted again early this evening and after smashing windows were finally repulsed by the police. Walford Bodie, the alleged mesmerist was again the object of their hostility.
Bodie was billed to appear at the Canterbury Music Hall and the students turned out en masse. They occupied most of the seats on the main floor and when it was announced that Bodie because of illness had been compelled to leave town there was a loud cry for him to come upon the stage.
When he did not appear and other performers came on, these were promptly pelted with eggs until they retired. For more than an hour the performance was stopped and when at the end of that time Bodie did not come out, the students left in a body.
They paraded the streets, smashing windows and defying the police, who at last charged them, arresting a number of the rioters. The other rums sembled and marching westward in deluged in many rowdy acts. There were several encounters with the police, who in the end were victorious
