Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor now to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of abstaining from Nicotol, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result.

THE PRIDE OF LLEWELLYN

By Mrs. E. Southworth

will go down to be married—will you not?" whispered Mrs. Jay.
"Oh, yes, Aunt Jay, I will go down to be married," replied Gladys, heavily.
"But I will not be married after I get down, for all that," she added mentally.

"It is all right. The drug works. She will now do all that she is told to do," said Mrs. Llewellyn to herself.

Mr. Stukely was waiting in the passage to receive her.
"Take her on your arm, James, and lead her downstairs," said Mrs. Llewellyn.

Mr. Stukely advanced and drew Gladys's arm within his own, saying, as he did so:

"Cousin, I don't quite know as a fellow is doing right in marrying a girl when he don't even know whether a girl likes a fellow or not."

"Never mind!" said Gladys, sleepily. "Well, if you don't mind, I am sure I needn't."

"Oh, if it is alright, enough said. Come along!"

And Mr. Stukely drew the arm of Gladys within his own and led her downstairs.

The lower hall was lined with servants of the family all in their holiday clothes, assembled to witness the marriage.

They were drawn up on either side, leaving a way free for the bride and bridegroom to pass. There was not one smiling face among them. All were grave; some were fearful. Alike near the drawing room door, where she could see all that was going on.

Stukely led Gladys through this array of domestics on into the drawing room.

There was no one in the room except the Rev. Mr. Kellogg, who stood immediately before the marble table that had been arrayed and decorated as an altar.

Stukely led Gladys up before the minister.

Mrs. Llewellyn followed and stood behind them.

The doors had been left open, that the servants might witness the marriage.

The minister was a tall, finely-formed, most reverend-looking parson, whose mild blue eyes beamed with benevolence, whose fair, noble features were seamed with many wrinkles, and whose long, white hair, parted over his forehead, rolled down each side in flowing silvery locks upon his black cassock.

He smiled the feeble smile of age upon the young couple before him, and murmured to himself, as if thinking aloud:

"Why I married her grandmother and I married her mother, and now to think that I should live to marry her!"

"Extraordinary!" muttered the bridegroom, in reply, although nobody had spoken to him.

"Be so good as to commence the ceremony, if you please, sir. My ward is not well, and may not be able to bear the fatigue of standing long," said Mrs. Llewellyn.

The old minister bowed gravely in reply, and then opened the book and, in an impressive voice, began to read the preliminary exordium.

Gladys allowed him to proceed until he arrived at these words:

"If any person here present can show just cause why this man and this woman may not lawfully be joined together, let them now declare it, or else forever after hold their peace."

During the short pause that followed, Gladys turned and looked steadfastly into the face of Mrs. Llewellyn, but the eyes of that lady were grave, bent upon the ground.

The minister proceeded with the ceremony. Addressing now the young pair before him, he uttered the solemn adjuration of the ritual:

"I require and charge you both, as ye shall answer at the dreadful Day of Judgement, when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed, that if either of you know any impediment why ye may not lawfully be joined together in matrimony, ye do now confess it."

"I will!" said Gladys, suddenly, tearing off her bridal veil and wreath and casting them from her.

The old minister dropped his book and stared with astonishment. Though he had distinctly challenged this interruption, he had not expected it. But let me hear what she has to say. Explain yourself, my child.

This encouraged Gladys, who commenced and poured forth to attentive ears the history of her marriage. And so long as she spoke of the events of that had preceded the mysterious disappearance of her husband and her consequent severe illness at Ceres Cottage, her story was clear, concise and perfectly consistent, and evidently impressed the old minister with its fidelity and truthfulness. But when he came to talk of her voyage down the Chesapeake in search of her husband, her adventures at Norfolk, her meeting with Mrs. Llewellyn, her journey back into Virginia, and her sufferings at Kader Idris under the influence of drugs administered by Mrs. Llewellyn, her narrative grew obscure, rambling, and often contradictory, so that the old minister was shaken in his faith.

There were many good reasons for this difference in the style of the poor girl's narrative. The events that had preceded the disappearance of her husband had all transpired while she was yet sound in mind and body; the events that followed had all happened while she was ill, imperfectly convalescent, or under the influence of stupefying drugs. Therefore, her remembrance of the first epoch was perfectly distinct, while her recollection of the second was very obscure. Another difficulty in the second part of her narrative was this: that while speaking of the drugs that had been administered to

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of WATER.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proved to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and back-ache.

"A wife! She is a raving maniac!" cried Mrs. Llewellyn.

"My good lady, if she is indeed a raving maniac, she is as incompetent to enter into this marriage as if she were already a wedded wife. But let me hear what she has to say. Explain yourself, my child."

This encouraged Gladys, who commenced and poured forth to attentive ears the history of her marriage. And so long as she spoke of the events of that had preceded the mys-
