ainly must not stay there, with no place but that dark little closet in which he sleeps," replied the gentleman.

Mrs. Rawson's kindly sympathy and gentle manners had quickly won Nan's confidence and the girl welcomed her warmly when she appeared in the little room the next morning. She found Nan sitting by the open window, with her pale little brother in her arms.

"Oh, I'm ever so much better," she said, in reply to Mrs. Rawson's inquiries. "The doctor's medicine helped me right away, but I don't feel very strong yet—not quite well enough to begin my cooking again. I'm going to begin it to-morrow," she added.

"Indeed, you'll not do any cooking to-morrow, Nan," said the lady, decidedly. "You're not fit to stand over the stove or the mixing board, and besides, it would make the room too hot for the baby."

Nan glanced anxiously at the little face on her arm.

I can carry him in to Mrs. Hunt's. He's no trouble, and she's always willing to keep him," she answered.

"Now, my child, I want you to listen to me," Mrs. Rawson began, and went on to tell the girl about the plans she had made for her and her little brother.

Nan listened, with the colour coming and going in her face.

"It is so good—so kind of you to think of this," she exclaimed, earnestly, "and I'd love to go. Mrs. Rawson, you don't know how I hate living in a place like this," she shuddered, as she spoke, "and it would be like heaven to get away into the sweet, clean country, with good people—but I can't go unless there is something I can do there. I couldn't go and live on charity, you know."

BALAAM'S ASS.

Bishop John M. Moore is not only one of the most eloquent, he is also one of the most learned preachers in America.

At a dinner in Nashville a local preacher boasted that he was self-made, and had climbed to his present success by his own efforts solely.

"Yes, Bishop," he concluded, "the Lord opened my mouth to preach without sending me to no college first."

"Indeed!" said Bishop Moore. "How very interesting! A similar event happened in Balaam's time."

WHY THEY LAUGHED.

The Bishop of London, who has announced his intention of parting with his town house in St. James's Square, told a good story recently concerning a colleague of his who was on his way back from visiting friends in New York.

He and his wife (said Dr. Ingram) were allotted a large double cabin. One night during a thunder storm the lady complained of the closeness of the air, and her spouse dutifully arose and opened a porthole, whereupon a big wooden ball bobbed in and kept on bobbing.

The Bishop knotted up its string and hung it on the wall of the cabin; but it bumped as the vessel rocked, and annoyed the lady further.

So the patient Bishop let out the loops and put the ball under his pillow; after which, peace and slumber.

The next day at dinner the Bishop recounted his adventures of the night, and bridled somewhat at the roars of laughter which greeted the story.

Eventually, the captain recovered sufficiently to gasp:—

"Why, man!—!—that is, My Lord! That ball you slept on hangs at the end of the ship's lightning-conductor!"
