This was on Saturday, and the boys probably thought that the ride to Detroit on Sunday would present ample facilities for the "sobering-up" process. Perhaps they sized it up this way: "Well, it's Sunday, and we can sleep it all off to night," and then paid another visit to the source of all evils in baseball. At any rate, the New Yorks dropped the two games to Detroit, and that, too, when they inch them as good as won.

He said on Tuesday that he would not meet Frank Hearld or any one else until he had settled one way or another with Sheedy and Sullivan. When this decision was reached, no matter which way, Mitchell will sail for England to see his father and mother. He will only make a short visit, and will return to the United States to make it his permanent home. He has carned quite a pot of money which he intends to invest safely, and will do the exhibition act. He will not open a saloon, he says, under any circum-
