

He Who Practiced as He Spoke.

When a Christian statesman, conspicuous for his civic virtues, as well as for the integrity of his private life, addresses the public in behalf of some political, philanthropic, or economic measure, his words are listened to with marked attention and respect, independently of the intrinsic merit of his arguments and of the eloquence with which he enforces them.

This line of reasoning acquires overwhelming force when it is applied to our Saviour. We admire, indeed, the beauty of his moral maxims, but their intrinsic excellence is enhanced by the splendor of his spotless life and matchless virtues, which shed a halo on his words.

Jesus never inculcates a moral duty which he does not practice in an eminent degree. He taught by example before he taught by precept.

Witness the conduct of our Lord in the hour of His passion. What firmness and constancy He displays under the most severe trials! What dignity and composure, what self-possession under the most provoking insults!

Witness our Saviour when he sees His Father's house profaned, when He sees the temple of God changed into a market place. Observe the indignation of His looks and the fire of holy wrath that flashes in His eyes when, single-handed, he seizes a scourge and drives the buyers and sellers out of the temple, saying to them, "My house is a house of prayer, but you have made it a den of thieves."

Now, contemplate our Saviour at the tomb of Lazarus. See how the lion in the temple is transformed into a lamb at the tomb; how the lion among the money changers becomes a lamb among the mourners. The eye that flashed with indignation in the temple melts into tears at the grave of a friend.

The gospels tell us that when Jesus stood at the tomb of Lazarus He wept. I never read in the gospels that Jesus laughed, but I read more than once that He wept. And yet the tears of Jesus have brought more joy and consolation to the human heart than all the mirth provoking books that were ever written.

This incident suggests to us an important truth—viz., that the most delicate sensibility is not incompatible with the most sturdy manhood; nay, it teaches us more: the tender sympathy and emotion are essential to true manhood. The courage of the man is not the courage of the brute. The man who has gone down into the human heart and sounded the depths of its sorrows and sympathized with its sufferings in others, as Christ has done, is best fitted to bear his own cross when the hand of adversity presses heavily upon him.

imitate him, and thus you will become more conformable to that heavenly model who is "the splendor of God's glory and the figure of His substance."

Make yourself familiar with the words and deeds of your Master by the frequent perusal of the gospels. The gospels contain the best narrative of Christ, because they are inspired, and are not diluted by human speculation. Christ will be your light in darkness. He will be your companion in solitude, your rest in weariness of spirit. He will be your teacher in doubt, your physician in sickness of heart, your strength in weakness, your joy and consolation in sorrow and affliction. He will be your life in death. "Follow Me," He says: "I am the way, the truth and the life. He that followeth me walketh not in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

BLOODLESS GIRLS

Can Obtain New Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Anaemia means bloodlessness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich, red blood and thus cure anaemia. When the blood is poor the nerves are starved and irritable. Then comes hysteria, neuralgia, sleeplessness and other nerve disorders. Headache, backache and sideaches wear out and depress the poor, pale victim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills soon bring ruddy health and lively vigor. They soothe the jangled nerves and give new strength to every organ.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any case of bloodlessness just as surely as they cured Miss Allen. The pale, anaemic needs only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood with every dose. That is why they cure all common diseases like anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, palpitation of the heart, headaches and backaches, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis and the secret troubles that make the lives of thousands of women miserable. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Editor of Punch.

Sir Francis Burnand, for twenty-three years editor of the great English humorous weekly, "Punch," has resigned. He is one of the most famous editors in England, and the most powerful. It has often been said that the satire of Punch has killed more men and measures than the English Parliament. Under his editorship, perhaps because he is a Catholic, Punch has shown little of the old partizan bitterness and of course none of the anti-Catholic bigotry which for years disfigured it.

If ever a man found his right vocation it was Burnand when he became editor of Punch, yet he settled on the vocation of a humorist after deciding first to become a lawyer, then an Anglican clergyman, then a Catholic priest, and then an actor. Why he should ever have imagined that he was cut out for the ministry history telleth not. At Eton he was highly popular as an organizer of mischief and dramatic performances, and in 1851, when he was fifteen years old, he wrote a farce which was not only performed at his tutor's house at Eton, but which was afterwards played by a professional company. Then he went to Cambridge, and his Eton reputation had preceded him. He and several other undergraduates started a dramatic society—an absolute innovation at an English university in those days. Burnand gave almost all his time to it, and how he ever managed to take his B.A. degree was as much a mystery to himself as to everyone else. However, he had wasted little time in sports. In football, he said, he was always "more shinned against than shinning."

After leaving the university Burnand became a barrister. Then, for a time, he thought he wanted to be a clergyman, and worked under Canon Liddon. He was converted to Catholicism and studied for the priesthood under Dr. (late Cardinal) Manning. But he decided before long to become an actor. One day he went to Dr. Manning and said he feared he had mistaken his vocation. He felt that his real vocation was the stage.

Manning sniffed. "A vocation," he said, severely, "concerns the spiritual welfare. You cannot speak of going on the stage as a 'vocation.' You might as well call being a cobbler a vocation." Burnand smiled nervously. "Well, yes, Dr. Manning," he said. "But if I were a cobbler I should still have the cure of souls." Burnand, however, did not become an actor. Instead, he began to turn out with astonishing rapidity pieces for the stage, a large number of which proved highly successful. He wrote for the comic papers, too. Even when he was at Eton he contributed an occasional joke to Punch, and when he became a regular contributor to Fun. After he had been with that paper a year he wrote a burlesque novelette called "Mokeanna," which the editor of Fun rejected. Burnand took it to Mark Lemon, editor of Punch, who immediately accepted it. It was one of the biggest successes ever printed in Punch, and most people believed that Thackeray was the author.

Burnand took it to Mark Lemon, editor of Punch, who immediately accepted it. It was one of the biggest successes ever printed in Punch, and most people believed that Thackeray was the author.

Burnand has been employed by Punch ever since. His activity has been amazing, and when the sparkling, bubbling character of his humor is taken into consideration it becomes more amazing still. He is an inveterate punster; every English humorist has to be, but the number of puns he incorporated into his books was a little too much for even the average English reader. "Ten puns on a page is exhausting," some critics once said about "Happy Thoughts."

There is a legend in the Punch office that Burnand had a big Chinese jar which he always kept full of slips of paper on which he had written puns. When more "copy" was needed he would plunge his hand into the jar and pull out enough to last a month.

It is hardly surprising that when Burnand became editor one of the first things he did was to order other people to stop writing puns. He wrote to one contributor:

"Dear Sir: Your joke is returned. It is an ancient Millerite."

To another contributor, a member of the Punch staff, he wrote:

"For goodness sake, send no more puns. They have all been made!"

When he joined the staff of Punch Thackeray called him the "new boy," and he seems to have remained a boy in heart ever since. He could even joke about a report of his own death. The London morning papers had all received telegrams saying that the editor of Punch was dead, and printed appreciative obituary notices.

"Why," said Burnand at the next Wednesday dinner, "they gave me a column each. That's more than I expected. A column! That's what they gave to Nelson and the Duke of York."

On another occasion the Punch staff was discussing a baseless report that they had all been entertained at dinner by Lord Rothschild.

"The only dish at that dinner," said Burnand, "was canard."

Sir Francis has been rather a sufferer from canards in the course of his career. Not long ago some of the London papers, in printing a report of the arrest of a man named Burnand, asserted that he was a brother of the editor of Punch. Sir Francis wrote a letter of denial, in the course of which he said:

"I have no brother. I have two half brothers (this man is neither of them), but two half brothers don't make a whole brother."

In treating of serious subjects Burnand wielded a graceful and fluent pen.

The new editor of Punch is Owen Seaman, who is just a quarter of a century younger than the retiring editor.

Many Women Suffer UNTOLD AGONY FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Very often they think it is from so-called "Female Disease." There is less female trouble than they think. Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, and a dragging-down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female troubles." Why, then, blame all your trouble to Female Disease? With healthy kidneys, few women will ever have "female troubles." The kidneys are so closely connected with all the internal organs, that when the kidneys go wrong, everything goes wrong. Much distress would be saved if women would only take
