GRUESOME STORY FROM ST. THOMAS, WHICH IS PROBABLY UNTRUE.

Chicago Blade. St. Thomas, April 7,-Middlemarch is little crossroads town about three miles west of this city. It consists only of a roadside tavern, a blacksmith shop, a grocery store, and a few dwelling houses. For many years in the most pretentious of the latter John Hendershott resided. He owned farming property and was engaged in trading and speculations of kinds, in which he had acquired the reputation of being somewhat of a sharper. In the spring of 1894 his nephew, Wm. Hendershott, came to live with him and work on bis farm. He was a young man about 22 years of age. The uncle also had a young nephew named William Welter, in his employ, and the latter and his employer were close companions, baving many tastes in common. Young Welter speedily fell in love with his employer's pretty daughter, and Rose returaed his affection. The pair, however, were not well enough off in worldly goods to start housekeeping, and at this point the plot began to take form. The elder Hendershott persuaded his nephew to insure his life for $11,000 in his favor, the uncle agreeing to pay the premiums on the policy. The young ma nonsented, and the insursurance was consequently taken. Then the elder Hendershott and his prospective son-in-law plotted to murder the young man and divide the insurance, and Welter and Rose could then be married. Several attempts were made but in December, 1894, the deed was actually committed. The two young men went to cut timber about a mile from Middlemarch one wintry after-noon and young Hendershott was NEVER AGAIN SEEN ALIVE. A!bout five o'clock in the afternoon Welter presented himself at a farm house half a mile from the woods and announced that in felling a tree the timber had fallen upon William Hen-dershott and killed him. For a day or so the story was believed, but the fact of the young farm laborer being so heavily insured in favor of his uncle gave rise to suspicon, and an investigation followed which led to the arrest of John Hendershott and William Welter. It was never proven that Hendershott was actually present or had a hand in the killing, but he was convicted as an accomplice. It was proven that young Hendershot was killed with an axe while drinkng from a pool, and the body afterwards placed beneath a newly felled tree. The axe was found hidden under an old log. The prisoners were tried, convicted and hanged in the county jail in St. Thomas, in June, 1895, having confessed their guilt.

The woods where the tragedy took place is a most dreary and lonely spot not far from the road. Practically no work has been done there since the time of the tragedy. The country people have hurried past the place in daytime, and avoided it as much as possible by night, strange tales have been whispered about that the place been seen flitting about among the sombre trees. Young people coming home at night from singing school and prayer meetings declare that they have heard weird voices and seen spectral figures flitting about under th spreading maples. But the climax is given by two young men. farmers' sons, Jim Coleman and George Mc-Adam, who were out hunting for foxes recently. Their hounds struck a warm trail, and led them a lively chase through the woods and fields of their own and neighboring farms. The quarry seemed to be not far distant boys did not not notice that short afternoon was rapidly merging into darkness. They pressed forward, when, after a time the dogs seemed to lose the scent, and after a few aimless attempts the animals came and lay down at the feet of their masters, as much as to say, "we have don-our best, but it's no use to try fur

WEARY AND HUNGRY the boys started for home, and ere long it was quite dark. There was no moonlight, the snow, however, making the night comparatively light.

Before they knew where they were

Before they knew where they were the young hunters stumbled right into the dreaded Middlemarch woods. They kept close together and spoke in whispers. The dogs slunk uneasily behind them. Then one of them began to utter low whines, and suddenly the other hound stopped, threw back its head, emitted a blood-curdling howl of terror, and vaulting over a log, disappeared in the gloom, followed closely by its mate.

The young men were horror-stricken with fear, for they saw three shadowy figures of men walking towards them. One was in his shirt sleeves, another carried an axe, while the third wore an overcoat and carried a whip. The one in shirt sleeves suddenly paused beside a pool of water, got down on his hands and knees and began to drink. The man with the overcoat touched the arm of the man with the axe. The man with the axe stepped forward, swung the implement in the air, and brought the back stepped forward, swung the implement in the air, and brought the back of it down on the head of the unsuspecting drinker at the pool.

The victim, apparently only dazed, heavily and his assailant again struck him with the flat side of the axe. Then the two appeared to converse a moment, both in turn stooped and felt the heart of the murdered man, and together lifting the body, carried it to a newly-felled beech tree and carefully placed the battered head underneath it. Then the man with the carefully placed the battered head underneath it. Then the man with the overcoat seemed to give a few directions, then picked up his whip and vanished. The other man hid the axe inside the bark of a log, washed his hands in the pool at which his victim had drank, and then the phantom form vanished into thin air.

The boys were paralyzed with an The boys were paralyzed with an unspeakable fear and horror. They knew what this horrible ghostly pantomime meant, and joining hands they ran for dear life from the tertible spot, stumbling over the logs and undergrowth. haustion and one has since been laid up with brain feyer.

The people of the locality firmly believe that the boys saw the tragedy as it was really enacted, and are satisfied that this sets at rest the doubt that Hendershott, senior, was himself actually present and participated in the killing. The Middlemarch haunted woods is the main topic of the countryside, and the superstitions the countryside, and the superstitious claim that the spirit of John Hendershott cannot rest easy until it is es-tablished to the satisfaction of all that he was equally guilty with his

REMARKABLE SUCCESS

Of a New Catarrh Cure.

A large and constantly increasing majority of the American people are catarrh sufferers. This is not entire-ly the result of our changeable climate, but because modern investigation has clearly proven that many diseases known by other names are really caatrrh. Formerly catarrh was applied almost exclusively to the common nasal catarrh, but the throat, stomach, liver, bladder, kidneys and intes-tines are subject to catarrhal diseases is well as the nasal passages. In fact, wherever there is mucou nembrane there is a feeding ground for catarrh. The nasal remedies, inhalers, sprays, douches or powders, have been practically failures, as far as anything more than temporary relief was con cerned, because they simply dry up th mucous secretions, without having the remotest effect upon the blood liver, which are the real sources of oa-tarrhal diseases. that the radical cure of catarrh/could never come from local applications, but from an internal remedy, acting on the blood and expelling the catar-rhal poison from the system.

A new internal preparation which has been on the market only a short time, has met wi h remarkable succes as a genuine, radical cure for catarrh.

It may be found in any drug store, sold under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, large pleasant tasting lozenges, composed principally of antiseptic ingredients, eucalyptol, guaiacol. sanguinaria, hydrastin and similar catarrh specifics.

Dr. Ainslee in speaking of the new catarrh tablets, says: "I have tried the new catarrh remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, upon thirty or forty pa-tients with remarkable satisfactory results. They clear the head and throat more effectually and lastingly than any douche or inhaler that I ever seen, and, although they are what is called a patent medicine and sold by druggists, I do not hesitate to recom-mend them as I know them to be free from cocaine and opistes, and that even a little Any sufferer from nasal catarrh, throat bronchial trouble, catarrh of the stomach, liver or bladder, will find Stuart's Catarch Tablets remarkably effective, pleasant and convenient, and your druggist will tell you they they are absolutely free from any injurious drug.

Papa-What on earth do Bessie an hat young man find to talk about? Mamma-Oh, questions of the hour, suppose.
Papa—I'll bet they haven't the renotest idea what the hour is!

Between the ages of fifteen and forty-five, the time when womanhood begins and motherhood ends, it is es-timated that the aggregate term of timated that the aggregate term of woman's suffering is ten years. Ten years out of thirty! One third of the best part of a woman's life sacrificed! Think of the enormous loss of time! But time is not all that is lost. Those years of suffering steal the bloom from the cheeks, the brightness from the eyes, the fairness from the form. They write their record in many a crease and wrinkle. What a boon then to woman, is Dr. Pierce's Favor-Prescription. It promotes perfect regularity, dries up debilitating drains, heals ulceration, cures female weakness, and establishes the delicate womanly organs in vigorous and permamanly organs in vigorous and permanent health. No other medicine can do for woman what is done by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

PART PLAYED BY BOER GENERAL'S WIFE IN SECURING PEACE.

low She Persuaded Her Stern Soldier Husband to Meet Kitchener and Milner In Conference-She Is a Daughter of Ireland.

The happiest woman in South Africa today is probably Mrs. Louis Botha, wife of the commanding general of the Boer forces. She succeeded in bringing about a conference between General Kitchener and her husband regarding a means of ending the South African war.

Love was the motive power that indue ed Mrs. Botha to attempt the seemingl impossible. She is a descendant of Rot ert Emmet, the Irish patriot, and the thought that she would have to treat with the foes not only of her country, but of her ancestors, must have stirred all the antagonism bequeathed to her from the past. But she remembered the beautiful Botha farm in Vryheid and the four children who called her mother and began her efforts for peace.

All that this meant in sacrifice of pride and race prejudice, what intensity of de-votion moved her to the attempt, she alone can tell. The influence of that self forgetfulness is traceable throughout the interviews of the two great leaders, it touches every provision of the armistice and turns the tide of good feeling of the two nations toward each other.

Only after months of earnest study of the situation did she act. She felt satisfied finally that the Boers were upholding a lost cause and that much blood was being uselessly shed. She saw the devastation that was sweeping over the country, and while Kruger, De Wet and Steyn were loudly crying for vengeance and announcing their determination to wage war to the bitter end Mrs. Boths quietly began her propaganda for peace. One by one she talked to prominent followers of her husband and found a strong sentiment, in favor of a speedy settlement. Surrender with honor was plainly an idea not displeasing to the men who, step by step, had opposed Buller's progress to Lydenburg. Having satisfied herself that her course would be approved by the majority, the brave woman found means to communi cate with the English. She intimated that the Boer forces would not oppose a cessation of hostilities should the conditions be to their liking. The reply was conciliatory, and the finale of many messages was a conficial summons to Cape Town to continuous with Lord Kitchener. se of her interview with the British sader Mrs. Botha learned that he would meet the Boers half way, and a messenger was at once dispatched to General Botha; but hardship and suffering had made Botha doubtful of British emency. His answer was half hearted and the wife who had braved so much almost despaired. She told Lord Kitchener, however, that she was determined to continue her peac work and left him with assurance that she would seek her husband and make a personal plea. At once she departed for the Boer camp and to Botha depicted th borrors that war had already brought to the patriotic burghers and their families. She drew such a vivid picture of desolation yet to come that the Boer general began to yield. She saw his indecision and renewed her plea for peace. Into it she brought their personal affairs and painted the happiness that would surely be theirs when warfare and bitterness were at an end.

Botha finally consented, though with much reluctance. She obtained her husband's promise that he would meet Kitchener, discuss the situation and state the terms on which he and his men would lay down their arms. Back to Kitchener she sped with the news. She bad scarcely known sleep. She was worn with anxiety and feverish with hope, but she did not leave the British general till a meeting between the leaders had been arranged. The world now knows the result of that meeting. To fully appreciate the difficulties with which Mrs. Botha had to contend we must know the character of her husband. He is not a pliant man nor one accustomed to surrender, but he is a man of intellect and as a member of the volksraad proved, during the many stormy scenes that preceded the actual declaration of war, that he possessed the coolest head in that assembly. He opposed the war and foretold the awful devastation war and foretold the awful devastation of his country which would follow in the footsteps of the British army.

But when the time came and his country was irretrievably pledged to war he was not the man to hang back. He was one of those who had much to lose and little indeed to gain by taking up arms, for, by honest industry, he had become a wealthy farmer and stock breeder. At the first call to arms he threw aside his senatorial duties and took up his rifle, rejoining his old commando at Vryheid as commandant under General Lucas Meyer.

It is said that at the battle of Dundee General Meyer, feeling convinced that the God of battles had decided against him and his forces, decided to surrender to the British, but Louis Botha fiercely combated his general's decision and point blank refused to throw down his arms or counsel his men to do so. From that moment Botha went up very high in the estimation of fighting burghers.

"What sort of language does that ig-rorant codfish talk?" asked the lobster of the sea urchin.
"Oh, I suppose it's some kind of Fin-nish!" replied the urchin.—New York i Commercial Advertiser.

HIGH PRESSURE DAYS.

Men and women alike have to work incessantly with brain and hand to hold their own nowadays. Never were the demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, more numerous. The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened condition of the nervous system, which results of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and in extreme both body and brain, and in extreme cases in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. From personal knowledge, we can recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on all the vital organs, builds up the whole system, and fits men and women for these high-pressure days.
