E. G. Scovil, Agent Pelee Wine Co.,

Dear Sir:—My wife has been afficted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelee Wine, which I am delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of the age, I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from la grippe debility, with like good results.

The undersigned non-resident ratepayers of the Parish of Johnston County of Queens are hereby notified that unless the amount of their respective Rates and Taxes as set opposite their names together with the cost of advertising (25 cents each) are paid within two months from the date hereof to the Collector of Rates for the said Parish for 1898 the necessary local proceedings will be taken to collect sick boy here? Mother of the Sufferer-Yes. Come in. Doctor, my poor dear is very sick. Since this morning-I don't know why -he keeps falling down.

"Falling down?" "Yes, all the time."

"Falling to the floor?" "Yes, to the floor." "That's strange. How old is he?" "Four years and a half."

"He ought to stand all right at that age. How did it begin?"
"I don't understand it at all, I tell you. He was very well last night, and he played all around the room. This morning I went to wake him as usual. I put on his socks, I put his little breeches on and then I put him on his feet. He fell at once."

"Perhaps he tripped." "Listen, doctor. I picked him up. He fell right down again. I was startled, but I picked him up-bang! down he went, and he did it seven or eight times running. I tell you, I don't know what ails him, but since this morning he keeps falling down."

"That's very singular. Let me see him."

You can see for yourself that the flesh of your dear child is absolutely insensible." (Speaking, he goes close to the boy and prepares to make the ex-periment.) "But—but what's this? What's this?" Works which are greedily sought after in one generation are neglected in the next. Booksellers now rarely think it worth while to give the height of an Elzevir or to devote a note to an Aldus. The first editions of the classics, which in the days of our grandfathers were the collector's chief pride, are now fall-en from their high estate. I have bought recently for 80 shillings a fine copy of the first edition of Aristophanes, Aldus, 1498, in a handsome binding, with gauffered edges, which in the first half of the century brought prices ranging from 180 francs to 425 francs. I could instance other similar cases of decline and fancy I can see symptoms of giving way in those books which the modera collector most affects. In Paris, indeed, a "rot" has set in as regards modern works. Yet the best books in good examples steadily mount in price. First folio Shakespeares, concerning which a discussion is being conducted in Notes and Queries, are far commoner books than is generally thought. The "boom" in them was started by Lilly of New street, W. C., who showed me rows of first folios which he never allowed to be sold under a certain price. These now bring large sums, and the tendency is and probably will be upward. In early poetry generally the prices, once thought very high, of the "Bibliotheca Anglo-Peetica" are now often surpassed. Booksellers of the better class tell me that there is a steady demand for good books --Notes and Quéries.

Something had finally happened. REVIVED MEMORY.

Vhen We Grow Old We Recall the Things of Long Ago. About seventy-five years ago, upon a rainy day, a small boy who had reached the mature age of 6 was sitting with his manima and bemoaning the state of the weather and accompanying absence of novel entertainment. Manima wore on her finger a beautiful ring that was a family heirloom, and as she sewed patiently the jewel glittered on her little white hand. The small boy regarded the bright bauble for some time in silence and then sweetly requested manima to take it off and let him play with it. It was a weak thing to do, perhaps, but she complied. I dare say there are mothers at the present day who can him."

The mother goes out of the room and then comes back with the boy in her arms. His chubby cheeks are rosy, and he appears to be extravagantly well. He wears trousers and a loose blouse starched with dried preserves.

"Why, he's a splendid child," says the doctor. "Stand him on the floor."

The mother obeys. The child falls. "Once more, please."

The child falls again. "Once more."

Third attempt, followed by the third fall of the sick boy.

The doctor is thoughtful. "Unheard of!" He says to the boy, whose mother holds him up by the arms, "Tell me, my fine little fellow, have you a pain anywhere?"

"No, sir."

"Does your head ache?"

"Doe your head ache?"

"Did you sleep you! heat night?" ing pushed his spectacles on top of his head and hunted everywhere for them head and hunted everywhere for them vainly, he sat musing before the fire, when suddenly a flood of light illuminated that dark corner of his memory where hung the picture of that small edition of himself losing or "putting away" the ring. He sprang to his feet with an excited cry: "The ring! The ring! I slipped it down the crack in the window casing. The one that looks out on the orchard!"

Upon investigation the ring was brought from its long hiding place, which was the exact spot the old man had described.—Buffalo Express.

Snail farming forms a peculiar branch of agricultural industry in France and other countries, and the consumption of them in France is very large. Edible snails vary greatly in size; the large white ones are the real escargot, but this term is usually employed to designate all edible snails adapted to table purposes. But in the markets, besides escargot, there are two other varieties, known as limace and limacon, the former being of medium size, and the latter quite small. Though the great majority of the edible snails produced in France are of natural growth, their artificial culture is carried on to a very considerable extent. They are propagated from August to October in ground especially prepared for the purpose, and fed with carringe, clover, etc.

During the winter they are sheltered in houses composed of brick or wood, and they are gathered and marketed from April to June. In the Tyrol from June to the middle of August the sarils are collected from every available darup place and taken to the feeding ground near the owner's dwelling. This is bit of garden ground free from trees and shrubs and surrounded on all sides by running water. In this feeding ground are little heaps of mountain pine twics, mixed loosely with wood moss, and these twigs when dry are replaced by fresh ones. Every day they are fed on cabbage leaves and grass, and when cold weather sets in they go under cover, that is, they collect under the heaps of twigs and bury themselves and there seal themselves up for the winter. When this has been successfully accomplished they are collected, packed in perforated boxes lined with straw, and sent off to Paris and other towns.—Nature. Snail farming forms a peculiar branch of agricultural industry in France and

• The Angelus Bird. When traveling in the forests of Guiana and Paraguay it is not uncommon to meet with a bird whose music greatly resembles that of an Angeius bell when heard from a distance. The Spaniards call this singular bird a bell-ringer, though it may be still more appropriately designated as the Angelas bird, for, like the Angelas bell, it is heard three times a day, morning, noon and night. Its song, which defice all description, consists of sounds like the strokes of a bell, succeeding one another every two or three minutes so clearly every two or three minutes, so clearly and in such a resonant manner that the listener, if a stranger, imagines himself listener, if a strunger, imagines himself to be near a chapel or a convent. But it turns out that the forest is the chapel and the bell a bird.

The beauty of the Angelus bird is equal to his talent. He is as large as a jay, and as white as snow, besides being graceful in form and swift in motion. But the most curious ornament of the Angelus bird is the tuft of black, arched feathers on its beautiful head. It is conical in shape and about four inches in length.—From The Guardian Angel.

A Sparrow's Gratitude to a Boy. It is a rare occurrence for animals in a wild state to select man for a com-panion and friend, yet well-authenticated instances when this has been done are a matter of record. The following in-cident is vouched for by a young woman cident is vouched for by a young woman who is a close and accurate observer:

"Last week my brother (a lad of 12) killed a snake which was just in the act of robbing a song sparrow's nest. Ever since then the male sparrow has shown his gratifude to George in a truly wonderful manner. When he goes into the garden the sparrow will fly to him, sometimes alighting on his h-ad, at other times on his shoulder, all the while pouring out a tunnitaous song of praise and gratitude. It will accompany him about the garden, never leaving him and gravitude. It was accompany from about the garden, never leaving him until he reaches the garden gate. George, as you know, is a quiet boy, who loves animals, and this may account, is a degree, for the sparrow's extraordinary actions."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
