Famous Young Horseman Dying-Lendon Dogs Gone to the Chicago Bench Show.

Horse Talk.

It is reported that Foxhall Keene, the lamous horseman and son of James R. Keene, is dying from the effects of injuries received from an accident which occurred in county Meath, Ireland, not long since. Mr. Keene received cablegrams the other morning. Foxhall Keene is one of the best known young men in New York, and is recognized as one of the best men riders in the world. He was the modest son of an indulgent millionaire. James R. Keene anned the famous horse Foxhall after his son.

The great 4-year-old colt Appomattox that the Wellington stable sold five or six weeks ago for $2,500 is dead. En route to New York he was detained five days at the Bridge by the customs authorities and raught a cold that developed into pneumonia, from which death resulted at Gutnonia, from which death resulted at Guttenberg on Thursday. Appomattox ran 12 races as a 2-year-old and won 3. He was then the property of G. V. Hankins & Co., of Chicago. At the end of 1890 he was bought by the Wellington stable, and in the colors of that syndicate last year started no less than 48 times, winning 15 and frequently finished a close second. His sarnings last year in purses alone amounted to upwards of $4,300. He was a chestnut, got by Fonso out of La Gitana, and was as game a horse as ever stood on four legs. Fourteen of his wins last year were at Gioucester and one at Saratoga.

THE WHEEL.

The novel bicycle railway about to be established between Mount Holly and Smithville, N.J., will be the only one of its kind in the country. The roadbed is a framework resembling an ordinary beard fence, on the top of which is a steel Trail, on which the grooved wheel of the bicycle runs. A brace run extends down on either side of the fence, on the end of which is a wheel that runs along the bottom hoard of the fence, and prevents the machine from overturning. Each bicycle will carry offe or two persons, and the machines are easily propelled, as there is but little friction. The trip between the two places can be made in seven minutes, and as there is one siderable travel each way daily it is the general belief that the road will be profitable. The inventor is A. H. Hotchkiss, who has arranged for the building of a similar road at the World's Fair.—[Pailadelphia Record. CURLING. delphia Record.

Twelve Bodies Recovered from the Ruins

Charred Remains—Saved by an Umbrella.

New York, Feb. 8.—At 10 o'clock all the bodies discovered in the ruins were taken to the morgue, and numerous articles that had been picked up were removed to the Thirtieth street station. Among them was package of letters marked "Lena Cohn," a handbag marked with the initial "Y.," and a silver thimble marked "M. A. D." The 200 men on the ruins had some narrow escapes during the day from the falling walls.

The 200 men on the ruins had some narrow escapes during the day from the falling walls.

Charles Blake, an elderly man from Stamford, Conn., came to inquire for his sister, Sarah Blake, 49 years of age. He thought the remains in the box marked No. 6 corresponded with the body of his sister but he did not positively identify her. A middle-aged man came in quest of Mrs. Rogers, of Brooklyni, Samuel Charley, beliboy at the Hotel Royal, said the body in box No. 1 was, he thought, that of Mrs. Lowis, the bookmaker's wife. He believes No. 4 to be that of her husband. Mrs. Mary McCarthy was quite certain that No. 9 was the body of Housekeeper Begley. Thos. White, of Orange, N. S., came to look after his brother Charles, also of Orange.

Toward 5 o'clock a steam derrick was placed on Fortieth street and a number of electric lights strung in order that the work could be continued all night. At 5:55 o'clock the body of a man about 40 years of age, height 5 feet 10 inches, was found near the Sixth avenue entrance of the hotel. It was marked body No. 10. At 7 o'clock the trunk of a woman was found (body No. 11) near the Sixth avenue entrance. There were no marks on the body by which it could be identified.

At 8 o'clock the trunk of a woman was found ear the Fortieth street entrance to the hotel. It was marked body No. 12. The legs and arms were gone. Mrs. W. S. Lockhard, of this city, who is suffering from internal injuries, is in a critical condition. All the others who were rescued from the hotei are said to be doing well. There was found in the ruins a black alligator hand satchel containing a 100-mile ticket on the Long Island Railroad made out in the name of J. H. May.

Felix Kraemer, a salesman for Steinway & Sons, who escaped by jumping from a window, said: "I opened my strong umbrella quickly and carefully put the sair and land lightly on the ground beneath, but I landed without any broken limbs and am all right now."

Body No. 9 was to-night identified as that of Mrs. Bagley

Mrs. Ethel Osborne Returns to England to Save Her Husband.

The climax in the latest scandal in London high life has been reached in the return to England and arrest of Mrs. Florence Ethel Osborne, wife of Captain Osborne, of the British army. The circumstance that Mrs. Osborne surrendered in order to save her husband from the loss of his prospects in the army, the current of public opinion has set somewhat in her favor. She is charged now with perjury.

The stolen jewels were worth $75,000, and were received by Mrs. Hargreave from her deceased grandmother, with whom she lived when a girl. Major Hargreave was secured as a husband for the grand-daughter in 1876. The grandmother's death occurred in January, 1890. Among the close friends of the Hargreaves were the younger members of the Elliot family.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliot died in 1889, leaving their children $30,000 each, and confiding them to the care of their grandfather, who gave them an allowance of about $5,000 a year and a house called "The Bottons," in South Kensington, a suburlo of London, rent free. To the average mind this would seem to be a fair provision for the orphans. But within a year of his mother's death Hugh had spent his $30..

At the end of the same time Ether was selling the last of the securities in which her $30,000 was invested, and was at her wits' end for money.

She was a tall, handsome woman, with waving dark hair and brown eyes, and teeth of which she was justifiably vain. She was clever and of a sweet disposition. She was very much in love with Capt. Arthur Osborne, of the Carbineers, who also had a small allowance, large debts, and extravagant tastes. He was in love with Ethel, and as soon as their affairs were straightened out, which meant unexpected liberality or unexpected death on the part of near relatives, they proposed getting married. He was a fine looking man, and his fiance was especially-proud of his delicate honor and chivalrous courage.

of his deficate notice and services age.

During the years 1889 and 1890, at various visits to the Hargreaves, Ethel Elliot, pushed for money, stole some of the jewels, on which in the latter year she raised £550. Suspicion at length fastened upon her, and this accusation led Capt. Osborne to hasten to her defense and marry her, in February, 1891. Exposure was followed by trial, conviction and flight, of which the sequel is the return of the guilty woman to save her husband from dismissal from the army.

GONE TO WASHINGTON.

First Meeting of the Bering Sea Joint Commission.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.—At 2 o'clock to-day Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice; Hon. M. Bowell, acting Minister of Customs; Hon. George E. Foster, Finance Minister, accompanied by Mr. Parmalee, assistant commissioner of customs, and Mr. Douglas Stewart, private secretary to the Minister of Justice, who will act as secretary of the delegation, left to-day for Washington by special car by the Canada Atlantic Railway. West Shore and Pennsylvania Railway. A meeting of the Cabinet was held this forenoon to complete the arrangement for the trip, as Mr. Foster did not arrive in time on Saturday to attend the meeting.

It was gathered from conversation with the Ministers that they expected no actual results from their visit. They meet President Harrison and Secretary Blaine on the 10th inst., and will first, as a matter of course, call on Sir Julian Pauncefoote. Sir John Thompson stated that the most they expected to do was to make arrangements for what could be discussed on a date to be named at a future time, When it was pointed out to one of the Ministers that it was little use going to Washington if the Government was still wedded to the idea that they would only accept a treaty in natural products, he replied that the Government was not tied to anything in particular as far as discussion went, and that there were a variety of things such as transportation in bond, the complaint of the States in regard to discrimination against them in respect to canal tolls, which the Government did not admit, and numerous other questions. He repeated the old yarn about having reciprocity in anything if it was thought necessary which would not discriminate against Great Britain.

The trip is locked upon here as a regular fasco, and no one expects anything to come from it. If it will help the Administration in the coming elections in Ontario that is all that is expected of it.

The enemony search of the first time today at the Arlington Hotel and made preliminary arrangements for a ser

Arrangements are being made for the settlement of the question of jurisdiction over Bering Sea by arbitration, and it is expected that a treaty to that effect between Great Britain and the United States will be in shape for submission to the Senate for ratification next week.
