The traders sold somewhat freely in the belief that the stock market had gone up too fast and that the decline was due. There was also some good selling of N. Y. London houses disposed of large blocks of stocks and this was taken as an indication that some nervousness was felt abroad at the financial international condition of Russia. The sharp advance in lead and smelters, the latter passing par for the first time in its history, rumors that the consolidation of the two companies which has been under contemplation for some time had reached definite shape. Blackmailer Alleged to Have Exciting Runaway on Hill Street -Team and Driver Have Close Call.

> A most spectacular runaway took place yesterday afternoon about 4 belonging to a local livery, and attached to a sleigh-hack, narrowly escaped going over an embankment into the river at the foot of Richmond

Earlier in the day the team had been hitched to a hack on wheels, and the harness was taken in, as the horses do not require such a space as when they are attached to a sleigh. As a result, when in the afternoon they were sent out with a sleigh they were hitched too close. Nothing happened, however, until the driver, after taking his passengers to their home on Maitland street south, started for the barn. He went to turn onto Hill street, and as he did the runners struck a huge lump in the road, and the right horse was hit on the heels: The animal took fright and commenced to run. The noment it did so the sleigh com-menced to strike the heels of both horses, and in a second the driver, a stout young fellow, found that the team was beyond control. He stuck to the seat and the team continued on their mad dash down Hill street, narrowly avoiding numerous collisions. They continued westerly until they came to the end of the street. Here a path runs from Clarence street to the foot of Richmond street, and it is used by pedestrians as a "short cut." Unable to turn the animals onto Clarence street, the driver pulled them on to the footpath, realization, that their speed must be cheeked.

ing that their speed must be checked here, and that by the time Richmond street was reached, they would have become quieted. The heavy hack swung from side to side as the team took the first few jumps on the path, and it was only by the merest chance that the team, hack and driver were not precipitated into the river which flowed a distance of 30 feet below. The back runners once started to slip down the bank, but they were drawn back into level ground. The slight turn which they had taken, however, sent them crashing into a fence on the other side of the path. So great was the force of the collision that driver was thrown twenty feet from his seat, and landed on another fence. He was uninjured, however. Nothing was damaged excepting the sleigh, the pole and whiffletrees of which were broken. The horses each received a few slight cuts on their hind legs. BRICK IS VERY SCARCE ARTICLE
