Prisoner Pennecott Declares He Will Not Support His Wife Otherwise.

The Pennecott case was enlarged once more in the police court this morning, this time until Friday morning. After all the evidence had been taken some little discussion arose as to which section of the statute the defendant should be tried under. It was thought by the crown attorney and the court that the amendment to one of the sub-sections covered the case, when it said that no man should be drunk or disordered on the street. The evidence went to show that Pennecott was drunk on the street, and that, though in the house at the time of the alleged disorderliness, his profane language could be plainly heard on the street.

P. C. Roberts was told that there was trouble at the Pennecott home on the night of March 15, and he kept an eye on the place. About 11:30 o'clock he went into the house and found Pennecott intoxicated and using objectionable language. The officer objected to Pennecott, but without avail, so he arrested him. Mr. Wm. Meredith appeared for Pennecott.

"Did you have any right to enter that house?" asked Mr. Meredith. "Most certainly he had a right to do so," interrupted the court.

Gennie Pennecott, son of accused, had whistled for the policeman that night. "Was your father drunk?" asked Mr. McKillop. "Yes. When he came up street he couldn't keep on the sidewalk," was the reply.

"What did he do when he came in?" "He didn't recognize my uncle at first. Then he called 'snakes and then worse and worse names. He called me a cur of a son. The policeman tried to quiet him. In arresting the court Mr. Meredith said:

"There's no question that a man can be drunk and loud in his own house, and I don't think that sort of behavior should be heard on the street."

"Anyone with common sense could tell that the boy would know that," said the police magistrate. "Well, I don't think so, your worship," replied counsel for Pennecott. Pennecott was most talkative at times. In conversation with his counsel he declared in a loud voice that he "would not let this family disgrace him, and he was going to get his legal rights." He also stated that he would not pay his wife a dollar if she did not live with him.

Pennecott, through his counsel, is anxious to lay an information against his brother-in-law for housebreaking. He alleges that they broke into his trunk some time ago and took out certain valuable papers that belonged to him. The information has not as yet been laid.

TWO YEARS IN PEN FOR SHOPBREAKER

Arthur Lewis Sent to Kingston by Magistrate Love—Beasley Gets Five Months.

Arthur Lewis, charged with shop-breaking, received a stiff sentence from Magistrate Love in the police court this morning, when he was given two years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

Lewis is a colored man of 23 or 24 years. About three weeks ago, while Alfred Patten, a Richmond street tailor, was away from his premises, Lewis broke the glass window at the rear and gained admission to the place. He selected several pieces of cloth valued at about $35, and made good his escape.

When Mr. Patten came back he noticed the absence of the cloth, and notified the police. After a week or two of searching, the detectives found part of the stolen property, and arrested Lewis, who pleaded guilty. The rest of the cloth has not been found, nor will Lewis tell of its whereabouts. This is his second conviction for shopbreaking, his method of procedure being similar each time. In the first he stole cigars and absolutely refused to tell where he hid the stolen property. Because of adopting the same plan this time, his sentence was more severe.

"I have found nothing favorable about you," the court told Lewis. "Your character is not good, and you have been shiftless and not by any means industrious. I believe that you have gained a livelihood mainly by criminal methods."

"Your honor, I've been working at the Grigg House four or five years." "You weren't working on an occasion when you stole. As a protection to the public, I feel that I should send you to Kingston Penitentiary for two years."

Percy Beasley, colored, pleaded guilty a week ago to making a raid on Thomas Hogg's clothes line and stealing underwear. He came up before Magistrate Love this morning for sentence, and when asked if he had anything to say in regard to the matter, stated:

"Only this, your honor, this man Hogg has all the stuff back, and I'm in the habit of doing that sort of business. I've learned a good lesson in the past two weeks, and if you'll be as lenient with me as possible, I'll thank you."

"You've been up before, Beasley," said the court. "But not for a very serious offense. I think that under all the circumstances that the ends of justice will be served if I send you to the Central for five months."

Beasley received his sentence with a smile. John Westman, proprietor of the Westman House on King street, pleaded guilty to selling liquor in prohibited hours, and was fined $20.

Inspector Galpin and P. C. Ernest Black paid the hotel a visit on Thursday night last, about 11:30 or 11:45 o'clock, and found several men imbibing freely in the barroom.

FOR GOUTY AFFLICTIONS A New Remedy Discovered by an Italian Physician.

London, March 23.—Dr. Ballaban, an ex-staff captain of the Italian Army Medical Corps, lectured tonight before the London Therapeutic Society on a new remedy for neuralgia, rheumatism, and all gouty affections. He began his experiments in 1892, basing his researches on the assumption that the diseases referred to are owing to an infectious poison, the blood poison, consisting of an injection containing amyle and benzole elements. Five or six injections in the muscles will subdue the disease, and relieve the patient of all pain. Dr. Ballaban calls his discovery arthralgon. It operates by combining with the uric acid in the blood, rendering it soluble, and thereby enabling it to be more easily eliminated. It also destroys the toxins in the blood.

"It may be possible, and I believe it will, to tell you New Yorkers and members of the Maritime Exchange before this time next year what the character of the coming month will be."
