LONDON, TUESDAY, SEPT. 14. QUEBEC'S BOLD MOVE.

The Government of Quebec has decided to copy Ontario's policy by prohibiting the exportation of pulpwood cut on crown lands.

Quebec has been for some years charging a duty of 60 cents per cord on wood cut upon crown lands for export, with a rebate for wood converted into pulp or paper within the provhastened by the new United States tariff bill, which discriminates against pulp and paper imported from Quebec and Ontario, but the step would later, regardless of American legislation. It looks as though the future of these great in-

New Ontario signifies something more than Cobalt. The lure of the the Canadian West have diverted attention from the northern clay belt, now being opened up by the two great railway projects-the National Transcontinental and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario. The country has been a revelation to some of the Provincial legislators who are now tour ing it for the first time. It is believed to be on the eve of a sensational development.

The extent of the clay belt is varlously estimated at from sixteen to apple. twenty million acres of what is declared to be the richest soil on the continent. The sandy loam subsoil retains the moisture, and the plow encounters no stones or boulders. This season's grain yield was exceptionally large, and included wheat, oats, barley and flax. , With the most fertile of pasture lands, dairying is already becoming a profitable industry, butter selling at 35 cents per pound.

Of course, the land has first to be cleared. There is, however, no sap root to the growing timber, nor is any firmly-embedded white pine, the woods consisting solely of spruces and jack and red pine. Roots are extracted with little difficulty. Timber, pulpwood and cordwood are easily disposed of at profitable prices, the railway picking up cargoes left the proprietor. along the tracks by the settlers.

The experience of some of the setflers has been as remarkable as anything in the west. On May 10 last one of them purchased his farm in WHAT AEROPLANES LOOK LIKE. His clearing was done too late steering a straight course across the season, but the timber alone more than paid double time for the work. Two brothers of this settler, who intended going out to Saskatchewan, have decided to join him in this most promising country.

Another settler who purchased 170 acres a couple of years ago for $700, has refused $5,000 for the property, and mathematics. still another is considering an offer of $1,100 for land for which he paid $125 last spring, and from which he his since taken a profitable crop.

A vigorous propaganda for the settlement of the clay belt should follow the visit of the legislators.
