ment, until suddenly the whole truth seemed to dawn upon him. He hesitated a moment, then turned to us with tears in his eyes.

"I will not be ashamed," he said. I have brought overshoes, as well. Bless you, my children, that you have been in such a hurry in well-doing, for you have even forestalled me."

We all gazed at the seven pairs of shoes, and they in turn seemed to gaze at us in unblinking shiny newness. Then with one accord we burst into merriment.

To say we roared with laughter is not sufficient, especially when George exclaimed, in awestruck tones, "Don't you wish you were a centipede, Margit?"

I believe Margit thought he meant some kind of saint, for she answered "Yes" glibly enough, at which we all burst out again.

Just as we were in the midst of it, who should appear but our vicar himself; he had been to see Denison's little boy, who was ill.

"Why are you all out so early this morning?" he enquired; "and why so merry?"

Papa turned round.

"You are to thank for this," he answered.

"Explain yourself. Why, pray?"

Papa explained. At which our vicar laughed more than the others.

"What must we do?" papa questioned.

"The shoes are paid for, so I suppose they will not take them back, and one pair is enough for Margit."

The vicar looked at the overshoes and kindly said:

"I can soon dispense with those. If I take six pairs for my parishioners they will prove welcome gifts this Christmas-time, and in return Margit shall have the value in other goods. I know exactly all she most needs, and will see to it to the best of my ability. I am truly thankful, my friends, that my sermon has touched your hearts with seven-fold power."

Accident Near Tupperville

The Owl train on the D. A. R. while on the run from Halifax to Annapolis on Wednesday evening struck a beautiful yoke of working oxen near Tupperville and in consequence the train was for a while badly demoralized. Both animals were instantly killed, one being thrown some distance from the track, while the other was run over and dragged several yards before the train could be brought to a standstill. The locomotive left the rails and much time was lost before the train could proceed. The oxen belonged to Mr. Howard Bent.

Since the start of the Baseball season we have been hindered with sore muscles, sprained ankles, etc., but just as soon as we started using Minard's Liniment our troubles ended. Every baseball player should keep a bottle of liniment handy.

Yours truly,
